

- of Almaraz, surprised and destroyed by General Hill, 413, et seq. His arrangements in Castile, 422. Operations projected for, by Napoleon, Sept., 1811, App. 520. Intercepted letters relative to his operations, 527. Official correspondence of, with Berthier, 529. English papers relative to his operations in conjunction with Soult, 548. French do., 549. His force and position in May, 1812, iv. 14. Dissents from the orders of the King, 15. His plan of defence against the advance of Wellington, 22. His military character, 25. His measures for restoring the discipline of his army, 23-4. Advances to the succor of the forts of Salamanca, 30. Skirmishes with the allies, 31, et seq. Retreats to the Duero, and takes a strong position, 35-6. See 39. Is joined by Bonnet, 40. See 42. Superior organization of his army, 43. Re-crosses the Duero, 44. Makes a forced march to the Guarena, 46. Takes a position on both banks, after a sharp combat, 48. Reflections on his movements, ib. Turns Wellington's flank—his skilful march, 50. Advantage of his position, 51. His movements preparatory for battle, 52, et seq. Separates the wings of his army in face of the allies, bringing on the battle of Salamanca, 55-6. Is severely wounded, 57. The command devolves on General Clausel, 58. Napoleon hears of his defeat—the generous conduct of, 73. Observations on his campaign, 75. Copy of despatch from the Emperor relative to, App. 480. Letter from Napoleon, 489. State of his army, June 12, 1812, 501. Total loss of, 502.
- Martinez, General, aids in the surprise of the fort of Figueras, and becomes governor of it, iii. 149. Is reduced to great straits, 151. Makes an effort to escape, but is forced to surrender, 179.
- Mascarhenos, unjust execution of, by the Portuguese Regency, iii. 221.
- Massena, Marshal, Prince of Essling, arrives in Spain, charged with the invasion of Portugal, ii. 327. Assumes command of the siege of Ciudad Rodrigo, 329. The governor surrenders 330. Takes Almeida, 387-8. Indecision of his movements, 3-9. Is directed by Napoleon to advance, 390. Description of his theatre of operations, ib. Extent of his command, and amount of his force, 392. Is deceived by Portuguese officers in his camp, 393. Concentrates his army, ib. Marches on Viza, 394. Baffled in his project of surprising Coimbra, 396. His indolence, 402. Battle of Busaco with Wellington, 403. Enters Coimbra, which is evacuated by the inhabitants, 407. Permits great disorders in his army, 409. Observations, ib. Leaves his hospitals with a small guard at Coimbra, and resumes his march, 413. Is delayed by a cavalry skirmish at Leiria, ib. (See Coimbra.) Reaches and examines the lines of Torres Vedras, 421. Takes a permanent position in front of them, 422. Seizes the islands in the Tagus, 430. Retires to Santarem, followed by the English, 433, et seq. His position contrasted with that of Wellington, 438. Important effect of, 439. Is joined by the ninth corps, 444. Forms a secret communication with Lisbon, 446. Observations, ib. Marshal Soult is ordered to the aid of, iii. 26. All communication between them cut off, 27. His situation becoming very perilous, 44. Resolves to retreat, 45. Makes an able movement upon the Mondego, 46, et seq. Halts at Condeixa, 51. Is foiled by Trant in an attempt to seize Coimbra, 52. Burns Condeixa, and resumes the retreat, 53. Retires behind the Alva, 56. His harsh and ruthless spirit, ib. False charges against, 57. Recommences the retreat, and reaches Celerico, 59-60. Factions in his army, 60. Is thwarted by Ney in a projected march to Coria, 61. Is driven from his position at Guarda, 62. Retreats to Ciudad Rodrigo, 66. Estimate of his loss, 67. Falls back to Salamanca, 68. Is neglected by Bessières, 78. Advances towards Portugal, 79. Arrives in front of the allied army, 81. Battle of Fuentes Onoro, 82. Is recalled to France, and the command given to Marmont, 86. The dissensions in his army, ib. States of his army in 1810-11, App. iii. 485. Extracts from correspondence relative to his operations, 514, et seq. Is appointed to command all the northern provinces, but declines in favor of Souham, iv. 124.
- Matagorda, the fort of, at Cadiz, taken possession of by the English, ii. 309. Its heroic defence and fall, 311.
- Mathieu, Maurice, is appointed governor of Barcelona, iii. 122. Defeats Campo Verde in an attempt to surprise the place, 143. Seizes Mattaro, 300. Defeats Eroles at Altafulla, 301. Co-operates with Suchet for the relief of Tarragona, iv. 301, et seq. Is succeeded by General Habert, v. 98.
- Maucune, General. (See Salamanca, Vittoria, Foy.)
- Maya, combat of, between Drouet and Stewart, iv. 361. Remarks on, 363. Extract from a memoir by Captain Norton on, App. 512.
- Medellin, battle of, Cuesta totally defeated at, by Marshal Victor, ii. 48.
- Melville, Lord, chief of the British admiralty, his mismanagement of the naval co-operation with Wellington, iv. 397.
- Mendizabel, General, see ii. 14, 383, 421, iii. 21, 28. Opposes the French at the siege of Olivenza, iii. 29. Commands in Estremadura, 30. Marches to the relief of Badajos, 31. See App. 479. Rejects Wellington's counsel, and is shamefully defeated at the battle of the Gebora, 33-4. His bad conduct, 77. See 273-4. (See Partidas, Biscay, San Sebastian.)
- Merino, the curate, ferocious conduct of, in the murder of prisoners, iii. 423.
- Merlin, General, suppresses an insurrection in Biscay, i. 198.
- Mermet, General, commanding the second corps d'armée, his movements in Estremadura, ii. 316. The command taken by General Reynier, 317.

- Mequinenza, description of, ii. 300. Besieged and taken by General Suchet, ib.
- Mijares, General, is defeated with great loss by Harispe at Yecla, iv. 226.
- Milans, Colonel, takes command of a body of armed peasants, i. 65. (See Catalonia.) Extracts relative to the conduct of, App. iii. 497.
- Mina, the student, guerilla a chief. (See Partidas.)
- Mina, Espoz y. (See l'artidas, Biscay, Pyrenees, et seq.) His troops disarmed for their excesses in the south of France, v. 31. Is beaten by the national guards while plundering, 33. Renews his excesses, and excites the population to arms, 58. Is chased by Harispe, 60. Invests St. Jean Pied de Port, 125.
- Ministers, English, their extravagant subsidies to the Spaniards, and crude projects, i. 102. Send a great number of ill-chosen agents, 103. Their measures in 1807-8 in regard to Spain and Portugal, 121. et seq. Their improvident system and unsettled policy, 128. Send an expedition to Portugal under Sir Arthur Wellesley 129. Contradictory instructions to various officers, ib. Folly of their plans, 132. Their object not the freedom of the Peninsula, but the humiliation of Napoleon. 187. The agents employed by them, and their powers, 189. Their attention diverted by the warlike preparations of Austria, 361. Their anxiety for the possession of Cadiz, and continued negotiations therefor, 441. Prevent the publication of a liberal manifesto by the Spanish Junta, ii. 123. Their incapacity displayed in fitting out useless expeditions, while neglecting the war in the Peninsula, 130. Character of, ib. 333. Make new arrangements for the defence of Portugal, 337. Their false policy, 351. Financial difficulties of, ib. Plunge into extravagant expenditures, 352. Their baseness towards Portugal, 425. Extracts relative to their neglect of Portugal in 1809, App. 465. Retrospective view of their policy with reference to the war, iii. 193, et seq. Parties among, after the change of administration, 199. Their imbecility shown by extracts from correspondence, 200. Their proceedings with reference to the Spanish colonies, 206-7, 452. Proceedings of, relative to Portugal, 213, et seq. Grant an additional subsidy to, 220. Encourage the Spanish guerillas, 269. The internal difficulties of Spain fostered by their aristocratic policy, 271, 328. Change of, 407-8. Their policy somewhat improved, 408. Absurd orders of, to Sir Home Popham, 423. Their vacillating conduct productive of great mischief, 438. Their corruption and tyranny, 449. Their foreign policy, 450. The war with the United States produced by their injustice, ib. Their foolish arrangements for the distribution of clothing, iv. 110. Charged by Lord Wellesley with imbecility in regard to Peninsula affairs, 182. Expose the coasts of Portugal to the operations of American privateers, 185. Their financial schemes, ib. Folly and injustice of, exposed by Lord Wellington, 186. By Mr. Stuart, 191. Results of their foolish arrangements for the Sicilian army, 225. Their mismanagement of naval affairs, 397. Disastrous results of their naval negligence at the siege of San Sebastian, 413. Their proceedings in regard to the invasion of France, 429. Hesitate to adopt a decided policy, 430. Hatred of democracy the moving spring of their war upon Napoleon, 468. Dishonorable proceedings of, relative to a general peace, v. 79, 80. Their unsettled policy towards Lord Wellington, 85. Regard him as a visionary, 89. Force him to cripple his means by treating as enemies those who wished to be friends, 122.
- Miranda, General, commands a Valencian reinforcement for Tarragona, iii. 165. Thwarts a movement for its relief, 170. See App. 498.
- Molino del Rey, battle of, between St. Cyr and Reding, i. 405.
- Moncey, Marshal enters Spain at the head of an army ostensibly for the invasion of Portugal, i. 26. Aids in suppressing a tumult at Madrid, 30. His operations in Valencia, in 1808, 71. Marches against the city of Valencia, 73. Is repulsed, 74. Defeats the Captain-General Serbelloni, 75. His plans interrupted by General Savary, returns to Madrid, 76. Observations, ib. Commences the second siege of Zaragoza, jointly with Marshal Mortier, 374. Is called to Madrid, 377.
- Montbrun, General, makes a fruitless demonstration against Alicant, iii. 299. His attempt injurious, 300. Observations on, 389.
- Monteiro Mor, the, at the head of the rabble, protests against the convention of Cintra, i. 162.
- Montserrat, the Junta of Catalonia flee to, from Tarragona, iii. 165. Description of, 175. Is taken by Suchet, 176. The taking of, injurious to the French, 281. Is abandoned by them, 282. The convent of, is burned by Decaen, iv. 86.
- Mun y Velarde, Don Arias, President of the council of Castile, recommends to the local Juntas a plan for establishing a central government, i. 206.
- Monzon, the heroic defence of, by an Italian soldier, v. 102. The garrison is entrapped by the treachery of Van Halen, 103.
- Moore Sir John, recalled from Gibraltar and sent to Sweden, i. 122. Returns, and sent to the Peninsula under command of Sir Harry Burrard, 131. Appointed to command an army destined for the north of Spain, 225. His embarrassing position, ib. His want of information and resources, 226. His arrangements, 228. Is obliged to separate the artillery from the infantry, ib. Commencement of the march from Lisbon towards Burgos, 229. Unreasonable urgency of the Central Junta, 230. His efforts to induce the appointment of a Spanish generalissimo, 232. His hopes as to the enthusiasm and co-op-

- eration of the Spaniards overthrown, 233. Position of his army in respect to the French and Spanish, 290. Reaches Salamanca, and finds the people apathetic under defeat, 291. His dangerous position, 292. Contemplates a hardy enterprise, 294. Hears of the battle of Tudela, and resolves to retreat, 295. Forms a junction with Sir John Hope, 298. Sensation excited by his resolution, ib. Receives insulting letters from Mr. Frere, the British envoy, 302. Encouraged by the resistance of Madrid, he again determines to advance, 303. Hears of the capitulation of Madrid, but adheres to his plan, 305. An important intercepted dispatch, 306. Falsehoods of the Junta, 307. Further insults from Mr. Frere, 308. (See Romana.) Strength and organization of his army, 310. Reaches Sahagun, and occupies that place after a combat, 311. Learns that Napoleon with all his forces is in march against him, 312. (See Napoleon.) Commences his retreat, 314. Remarkable display of courage and discipline, 316. Tumult at Astorga, 319. Retreats towards Vigo, 322. Miserable scene at Bembibre, 323. Combat at Calcabellos, 324. Changes the line of retreat to Coruña, 325. Abandons £25,000 of treasure, 326. Offers battle at Lugo, 327. It is not accepted, 328. Decamps in the night, 329. Reaches Coruña, 331. His preparations for resisting the enemy and embarking the troops, ib. Battle of Coruña, 335. Is wounded by a cannon shot, 336. His death, 338. Observations on his campaign, 344. His antecedents, injustice of ministers towards, 346. His military character and conduct defended, 348. The propriety of his retreat discussed, 351. His conduct calumniated by interested men—eulogized by Napoleon, Soult, and Wellington, 358. Slandered in Parliament by Mr. Canning, 361. Comparison between his operations and those of Sir A. Wellesley in 1809, ii. 195. Justificatory extracts from the correspondence of App. i. 501, 513. Order of battle of, 524. Return of the army of Dec. 19, 1808, 525. Return of losses of, ib. Letter from, to General Mackenzie, ii. 494. His plan for the government of Sicily rejected, but justified by the ultimate result, iii. 439. Excellent discipline of the troops formed by, iv. 27. Comparison between his retreat and that of Wellington in 1812, 177. The fate of the Peninsula decided by his campaign v. 219. (See Controversial Pieces.)
- Morena, the, topography of, ii. 264. The passes of, forced by the French, 268.
- Morillo, General, plunders the inhabitants in the south of France, v. 58. Is rebuked by Wellington, 60. Replies with slander and falsehood, 61.
- Morla, Don Thomas, reduces the French squadron at Cadiz, refusing the proffered aid of the English, i. 36. His double dealing in regard to the occupation of Cadiz, 124. Defends the brutal treatment of the prisoners of Dupont's army, 194. Negotiates with Napoleon for the surrender of Madrid, 282. A traitor and coward, 283. Endeavors to deceive Sir John Moore and others, 297, 299, 301.
- Morocco, the Emperor of, enters into an exclusive convention with the French, but is induced by the English to annul it iii. 308-9. Renews the treaty with Soult, to the exclusion of the English, 442.
- Mortier, Marshal Duke of Treviso, commands the fifth corps d'armée, i. 257. Commences the second siege of Zaragoza with Marshal Mincey, 374. Moves to Castile, 418. Is placed with his corps under the command of Soult, ii. 145. Defeats General Cuesta at Arzobispo, 173. Is posted at Talavera, 175. (See Andalusia.) Summons Badajoz, but finding it in a state of defence, retires to Merida, 274. Unites with the second corps, 316. Is recalled to Seville, 317. Returns to Estremadura, 318. Observations, 320. (See Soult.) His movements against Romana, 386. Invests Campo Mayor, iii. 43. The place surrenders, and he returns to the Guadiana, 71. Is succeeded by Latour Maubourg, 74.
- Mountain passes, general error relative to the strength of, noticed, ii. 266.
- Murat, Grand Duke of Berg, enters Madrid as commander of the French armies in Spain, i. 27. Is appointed a member of the Supreme Junta by King Ferdinand, ib. His precipitation disconcerts Napoleon's plans, 32. Is made President of the governing Junta by Charles IV., 33. Quits Spain, 49. His secret defection from and ingratitude to the Emperor, iv. 313. Letter from Lord William Bentinck in proof of, App., 505. Joins Austria, v. 79.
- Murcia, state of affairs in, Feb., 1811, iii. 184. A new army raised in, by Joseph O'Donnell, after Blake's surrender, 435. Operations in, iv. 92. The command in, given to General Elio, 101.
- Murray, Sir John, succeeds General Campbell in command of the Sicilian army at Alicante, iv. 222. Drives the French from Alcoy, 223. His vacillation—determines to attack Valencia, 224. The plan thwarted, 225. Extract from a letter in relation to—remarks, ib. Plans an expedition which is defeated with great loss by Suchet, 226. Takes a position of battle near Castalla, 227. His advanced guard is driven from the pass of Biar, 228. His hesitation—battle of Castalla, ib. Restrains his troops from completing the victory, 229. Resolves to abandon the field if Suchet again advances, 230. Wellington desires him to sail against Tarragona, 254. His preparations therefor, 297. Want of cordiality among his officers, ib. Takes San Felipe de Balaguer, 298. Besieges Tarragona, 299. His want of vigor, 302. His vacillating and contemptible conduct 303-4. Raises the siege, abandoning his battering train, 305. Disembarks again at Balaguer, 306. Is superseded by Lord William Bentinck, 307. His trial, ib. Review of his conduct, 308, et seq. Letter from Wellington to relative to the subsistence of his Spanish troops, App. 500. Official state of the army under, 514.

NAPIER, Major, the generous treatment of, by Marshals Soult and Ney while prisoner, i. 336, note.

Napier, Colonel, (the author,) letter from Marshal Soult to, relative to the retreat of Sir John Moore, App. i. 515. From Marshal Jourdan to, relative to the French passage of the Tormes, and the retreat of Lord Wellington, App. iv. 491. (See Controversial Pieces.)

Napoleon, the people's monarch, i. 16. Hated by the European aristocracy, ib. His invasion of Spain a fatal project, 17. Immense extent of his resources, 18. Difficulties of his position, 19. His aid sought by different parties in the Spanish court, 23. Concludes a secret treaty with Spain for the conquest and partition of Portugal, ib. Sends large forces into Spain under pretence of carrying out its provisions, 25. Manner of his interference with Spanish affairs—should have allied himself with the nation rather than its rulers, 29. His views against Spain cloaked by various pretences, 32. Prematurely exposed by the precipitation of Murat, ib. Charles and Ferdinand pensioned by, and Joseph chosen King at his desire, 33. Constitution prepared by, accepted, 34. His plan of military operations, 43. Strength and composition of his armies in the Peninsula, 44. His cautions and far-reaching policy, 51. Disposition of the armies, 52. First great crisis of his military system, 79. His instructions to Savary, ib. His early designs against Portugal, 121. Feeling towards, in England, 132. Chagrined at the surrender of Dupont, and retreat of Joseph, he resolves to crush the Spaniards, 217. His political position, ib. Speech to the soldiers on their way to Spain, 219. His conference at Erfurth with the Emperor Alexander, and their joint letter to the King of England, ib. His immense military preparations, 223. His notes on Joseph's retreat from Madrid, etc., 238. His plan of future operations, 240. Overrules the King's counter-project, 236. Reorganizes the armies in Spain, 257. Arrives at Bayonne, 263. Reaches Vittoria and arranges the plan of his campaign, 264. Immediate advantages of his combinations, 269. Marches against Madrid, 278. Forces the pass of the Somosierra, 279. Summons Madrid to surrender, 281. Storms the Retiro, 282. The town capitulates, 283. His reply to the submissive address of the principal inhabitants, 285. Makes dispositions for a vast plan of operations, 287. His plans arrested by the advance of Sir John Moore, 290. Marches against him with all his force, 313. (See Moore) Is recalled to France by the Austrian war, and directs Soult to continue the pursuit, 320. His conduct and that of the English Cabinet compared, 340. Notes of, upon the affairs of Spain in 1808, App. 461, et seq. His instructions to Soult for the invasion of Portugal, ii. 12. Conspiracy against, in the Peninsular army, 78. Reduces the forces in Spain for the war in Germany, 106. Orders a suspension of offensive operations, 175. Strength of his arrangements disclosed under reverses, 117. His prescience, 145. Sends reinforcements to Spain to form an eighth corps, 277. Is rumored to intend repairing to Spain—reasons why he did not, 327. Grandeur of his designs against the Peninsula, 338. State of his affairs in, 344. His policy in the government of Spain, 345. Strength and distribution of his armies in, 348. Directs Massena to advance into Portugal, 390. His prudence in military affairs, 393. Remodels the armies in Spain, iii. 45. The arrangement put in execution, 78. Changes the system of the war in Catalonia, 143. His clemency, 180. His answers to Joseph's complaints, 187-8. Is incensed at Joseph's resignation of the crown—gives him new terms, and obliges him to return, 190. Secretly prepares for a war with Russia, 192. Sends more troops to Spain, 244. His arrangements for future operations, September, 1811, 245. Indications of his intending to go to the Peninsula, 254, 274. The project balked by the Russian war, 275. Effect of his preparation for, on the war in the Peninsula, 325. Review of the different changes of the latter, 335. His enormous efforts, 336. Justness of his views vindicated, 389. Intrigues of Austrian and English agents against, in Italy, &c., 436. Causes of his war with Russia, 445. Secret policy of the European courts towards, 446. Scene on the Niemen, 447. His designs in regard to the Peninsula, 448. His proposals for peace considered, ib. Hears of the defeat of Marmont at Salamanca—his generous conduct towards, iv. 73. His criticism upon the errors of, 76, App. 489. His prescience, ib. His power shaken by the battle of Salamanca, 81. His system of war, 90. His attention to the care of the sick and wounded, 105. Unconquered of man, is vanquished by the elements in Russia, 167. His failure there, the safety of the Peninsula, 182. His embarrassed position, 209. His wonderful activity, 210. The Peninsular contest becomes secondary in his policy, ib. Replaces veterans there with conscripts, 211. His instructions to Joseph, 212. Opposed by, 213, 215. Reduces the subsidy of, 238. Is displeased with the movements of, 239. His instructions to Clausel for the suppression of the northern insurrection, 241. Complains of Joseph's inactivity, 249. His plans thwarted by, 256. Ingratitude of Murat, Bernadotte, and Francis to, 313. Sketch of his political and military situation, 343. His intellectual greatness, 344. His ordinance, that no fortress should surrender without an assault, defended, 404. Personal hatred of Wellington towards, 430. His policy and character defended, ib. Love of the French people for, 431. Copy of despatch from, relative to the operations of Marmont, App. 450. Proposes a treaty for the restoration of Ferdinand, which is rejected by the

- Cortes. v. 70. His views, 71. Treachery in his councils, ib. His political situation, 76. Treachery of Austria to, 77. His misfortunes, 78. Deceitful negotiations of the allied powers, 79. Accepts their offered terms, but they fly out, 80. Not deceived by their pretences, 82. Disquieted by the internal state of France, 83. Recalls a large portion of Suchet's forces 95, 100. Of Soult's, 112. Feeling of the people of the south towards, 113-14. Abdicates before the battle of Toulouse, 196. Character of his military discipline, 214.
- Ney, Marshal, Duke of Elchingen, commands the centre of Joseph's army on the Ebro, i. 247. Disperses the Spaniards at Logroño, 254. Placed in the command of the sixth corps d'armée, 257. His operations against Castaños, 273. The safety of the latter due to the erroneous and dilatory movements of, 276. His character, 277. Is appointed to command in Galicia, ii. 17. Marches into the Asturias, 102. Forces Romana to fly, and recovers a large number of prisoners, 103. Returns to Coruña, ib. Joins Soult at Lugo, 104. Combines operations with him, 109. Retires to Coruña on a misunderstanding with Soult, 112. Evacuates Galicia, and marches to Astorga, 113. Is placed with his corps under the command of Soult, 143. Refuses to concur in his plans, 174. Defeats Sir R. Wilson, resigns his command, and returns to France, 175-6. Resumes the command of the sixth corps, 323. Makes a feint against Ciudad Rodrigo, 324. Expected to have led the invasion of Portugal, 327. Commences the first siege of Ciudad Rodrigo, ib. Massena takes the command, 329. Leads the final assault, 330. Attacks General Crawford on the Coa, and forces him to retreat, 379. Besieges Almeida, 387. Joins Massena, 393. (See Busaco.) Defends the rear of Massena's retreat from Santarem, iii. 49. His skilful management at the combat of Redinha, 50. Combat of Casal Nova, 54. Fights at Foz d'Arone, against orders, 55. Refuses to obey Massena—is deprived of his command and sent to France, 61.
- Newspapers, English, the indiscreet disclosures of, ii. 366. Mischief occasioned by, iv. 125. Falsehoods propagated by, relative to Portuguese affairs, 461. Censured by Wellington, 464. Perfect intelligence conveyed to the enemy by, App. 490. Spanish, at Cadiz, pre-eminent in falsehood and wickedness, 470. See 471.
- Nive, passage and battles of the, v. 34, et seq.
- Nivelle, battle of the, between Wellington and Soult, general dispositions for, v. 12. The battle, 16. Observations on, 24.
- Norofia, the Conde de, takes command of the Spanish troops at Vigo, ii. 102. Joins Carrera, and assumes command of both forces, 111. Defends the passage of San Payo, ib. Resigns his command, and issues a manifesto against the Junta, 214.
- "Notables the Assembly of," meet at Bayonne, i. 33. Adopt a constitution for Spain prepared by Napoleon, 34.
- Novarro, Garcia, escapes from France, and becomes governor of Peniscola, iii. 302. His cowardice and treachery in surrendering the place, 303.
- OBSERVATIONS on the first siege of Zaragoza. i. 59. On General Duhesme's first operations in Catalonia, 69. On Marshal Monecy's campaign in Valencia, 76. On Marshal Bessières' operations against Blake and Cuesta, 81. On Dupont's operations in Andalusia and the battle of Baylen, 94. On Junot's earlier proceedings in Portugal, 119. On Sir A. Wellesley's first campaign in Portugal, 174. On the convention of Cintra, 184. On King Joseph's plan of operations after his retreat from Madrid, 245. On the operations on the Ebro before the Emperor's arrival, 261. On Sir John Moore's campaign in Spain, 340. On the defence of Zaragoza, 388. On the French operations there, 390. On St. Cyr's campaign in Catalonia, 421. On the Spanish operations at the commencement of 1809, ii. 63. On the French do., 64. On the operations of Lapisse, 66. Of Victor, 67. Of Cuesta, 69. Of Soult, 70. Of Romana, 71. Of Silveira, 72. On Soult's retreat from Oporto, ii. 96. On the movements of Sir A. Wellesley, 97. Of Marshal Beresford, 100. On the battle of Talavera, 163. On the campaign of do., 187. On the third siege of Gerona, 230. On Areizaga's advance against Madrid, 257. On the siege of Lerida, 297. On the movements in Estremadura in February, 1810, 320. On Soult's proceedings in Andalusia, 321. On Wellington's and Massena's operations in Portugal, 409. On the same, 446. On Beresford's campaign and the battle of Albuera, iii. 104. On Macdonald's and Suchet's operations in Catalonia, 180. On the second English siege of Badajoz, 230. On Wellington's blockade of Ciudad Rodrigo, and his operations against Marmont, 263. On Blake's and Suchet's operations in Valencia, and the battle of Saguntum, 2-8. On Blake's surrender of Valencia, and of his army, 304. On Wellington's siege of Ciudad Rodrigo, 350. On the campaign of Marmont, Soult, and Wellington at the opening of 1812, 388. On the campaign of Wellington and Marmont, and the battle of Salamanca, iv. 75. General, on the campaign of 1812, 167. On the battle of Vittoria, and the previous movements, 289. On Bentinck's and Suchet's movements in Catalonia, and the combat of Ordal, 328. On the operations following the battle of Vittoria, 387. On the siege of San Sebastian, 413. On the battle of the Nivelle, v. 24. On the movements of Soult and Wellington in front of Bayonne, and the battle of St. Pierre, 51. On the passage of the Gaves, and the battle of Orthes, 148. On the battle of Toulouse, and the conclusion of the war, 200.

- Ocaña, topography of, 248. Battle of between General Areizaga and Marshal Soult, ii. 249.
- O'Donnell, Carlos, commands a division of Romana's army in Estremadura, ii. 317, et seq. Succeeds Bassecour in command of the Valencian army, and sends troops to Tarragona, iii. 159. (See Valencia Blake.)
- O'Donnell, Colonel Henry, attacks a French post near Gerona, ii. 222. Sends a convoy to Gerona, but loses the greater part. 228. Breaks through the French lines on his return, 229. Is appointed commander-in-chief of Catalonia, 282. Is repulsed with great loss in a combat at Vich, 283. Retires to the camp of Tarragona, 284. Drives the French from lower Catalonia, 285-6. Marches to the relief of Lerida, 291. Is repulsed in a combat at Margalef, and retreats to Momblanch, 292. His skilful conduct, 302. Reorganizes his army, iii. 117. Strengthens Tarragona, and occupies several strong passes, 118. Enters Tortosa, 120. Makes a sally against the besiegers, but is repulsed, ib. Is baffled in a movement against Macdonald, 122. Cuts the French communication with the Ampurdan, 125. Makes a forced march towards Gerona, ib. Takes General Swartz and his troops prisoners at Abispal, 126. Is wounded, and returns to Tarragona, ib. Resigns the command, and is succeeded by Campo Verde, 135. Is made Conde de Abispal, ib. Is appointed a member of the Regency, 329. His measures judicious, ib. Resigns his seat in disgust, iv. 101. Is appointed Captain-General of Andalusia, 130. See 191, 292. Marches to join Wellington on the Duero, 268. Reduces the forts of Pancorbo, and marches to Pampeluna, 289. Takes charge of the blockade of that place, 296. Is reinforced by Carlos d'España, 354. His alarm on the approach of Soult, 366. Falls sick, 424. Quits the army, 433. Resumes his command, v. 31.
- O'Donnell, Joseph, organizes a new army in Murcia, after the surrender of Blake in Valencia, iii. 435. Is joined by General Roche, iv. 92. Is defeated with great loss in the first battle of Castalla, 93. Cramps General Maitland's operations by restricting his supplies, 95. Is superseded by General Elio, and censured by the Cortes, 101. Letter from, to General Donkin, in defence of his conduct, App. 498.
- Ogilvie, Mr., a commissary, captures a French sloop of war single-handed, v. 167.
- Olivenza besieged and taken by Marshal Soult, iii. 28. Retaken by Marshal Beresford, 76. Is retaken by General Godinot, 234.
- Oporto, insurrection against the French commenced at, i. 113. Tumult and assassination of French soldiers at, after the surrender, 172. British stores, detachments and sick concentrated at, in view of their embarkation, 438. Character of its harbor, ib. Insults offered to the British at, 449. Threatened by Marshal Soult, 453. Horrible state of anarchy in, on the approach of the French, ii. 21. Ill-directed measures for its defence, b. Soult's army arrives before it, 35. Wanton murders by the populace, 36. Is stormed and taken, with great slaughter, 37, et seq. Conciliatory policy pursued by Soult, 54. Is entered by Sir A. Wellesley, and Soult retreats, 88, et seq.
- Oporto, Bishop of, his extravagant demands of assistance from England, i. 127. Opposes the convention of Cintra, 162. Aims at the supreme power, 166. Plan for that object concocted with General Von Decken, 168. Letters of Von Decken in regard to, App. 496. (See Oporto.) Flees to Lisbon, becomes a member of the Regency, and is made Patriarch, ii. 54.
- Orleans, the Duke of, is invited by the Spanish Regency to command the border provinces, iii. 22. Is obliged by the Cortes to quit Spain, 24. (See Leopold.)
- Orthes, Soult's position at, v. 139-40. Battle of, between Soult and Wellington, 142. Observations on, 151.
- Drquijo, Spanish Minister of King Joseph, his vindication of the abdication of, App. iii. 504. (See Joseph.)
- PACK, General, prematurely blows up the Castle of Almeida, iii. 232-3. (See Salamanca, &c.)
- Pakenham, General. (See Salamanca, Vittoria, &c.)
- Palacios, the Marquis of, made President of the Supreme Junta of Catalonia, and commander-in-chief of its armies, i. 67. His successful measures for the relief of Gerona, 68. Is removed from Catalonia to the Sierra Morena, 366, 394. Advances to La Mancha to oppose the progress of the French, 367. Escapes Marshal Victor, and joins the Duke of Infantado, 369. Is dismissed from the Regency, and appointed Captain-General of Valencia, Murcia, and Aragon, iii. 202, 277. Intrigues against Blake, 285.
- Palafox, Don Joseph, escapes from Bayonne, and is placed at the head of the insurrection in Aragon, i. 37. Weakness of his character, ib. Commands in the defence of Zaragoza, 55. Would have fled the city but for the precautions of the plebeian leaders, 56. Is shamefully defeated in attempting to introduce succors, 57. Gives himself up to festivity, and assumes supreme authority, on the raising of the siege, 194. Arranges with Castaños an absurd plan of operations on the Ebro, 253. Proposes that the whole Spanish army shall confine itself to the defence of Zaragoza, 274. Is haughty answer to a summons to surrender at the second siege of, 376. His elation at a slight success in a sally, ib. Demands terms of capitulation, which are rejected, 386. Surrender of the city, 388. Was only the nominal chief during both sieges, 390.
- Palafox, Francisco, sent by the Supreme Junta as their representative to the army on the

- Ebro, i. 255. Controls the military movements in a very whimsical manner, 256. Aids in thwarting Castaños' plans, 273. Is imprisoned by the Central Junta, ii. 263. Is released on the dissolution of, iii.
- Palamos, the town of, taken by the French, ii. 216.
- Palombini, General. (See Tarragona.) His operations against the partidas on the Ebro, iii. 426. Joins the King's army, 428. Forages the country, and marches for the north, iv. 233. Opens the communication with Burgos, 239. His movements for the relief of Santona, Bilbao, &c., 242, et seq. Goes to Italy, 248. Character of his Italian soldiers, ib.
- Pampeluna. (See Joseph, &c.) Is besieged by Wellington, iv. 289. The siege turned into a blockade, under the command of O'Donnell, 295-6. Soult's movement for the succor of, 348, et seq. Commotion at, on his approach, 366. History of the blockade and fall of, 456.
- Paris, General, chases the partidas from Aragon, iii. 146. Evacuates Zaragoza and retreats to Jaca with great loss, iv. 318. (See Suchet, Soult.)
- Partidas, the, or guerillas, their character and organization, ii. 127. Inefficiency of the guerilla system, 207. Observations of St. Cyr on, 209. Secretly encouraged and organized by the Regency, in 1810, 350. Activity of the, in the northern provinces, iii. 113. Ill effects of their warfare, 115. Their operations in the eastern provinces, 116. In Aragon and Navarre, 130, 144, 178-9, 283, &c. French prisoners shot by, 284. Stimulated by Sir H. Douglas, 421, 423. Precautions of the French against, in the north of Spain, 422. Ferocity of their leaders, 423. Their activity in various parts, and operations against, 424, et seq. Operations of, in Biscay, in aid of Sir Home Popham's expedition, iv. 38. Take possession of the coast towns in, 108. Bad conduct of, at Burgos, 112. Harass the French in all quarters during the siege of, 126. Continuation of their warfare, 158. Take possession of Madrid, and treat the inhabitants as enemies, 159-60. Are driven out by the King, 160. Their operations against Suchet, 163. Become more disciplined and effective, 211. Movements of, in Navarre and Biscay, ib. In Catalonia and Aragon, 218-19. In the centre of Spain, 233, 237. In Leon and the Asturias, 234. Insurrection of, in the north, 239, et seq.
- Patriarch, the. (See Oporto, Regency, &c.) Insults Mr. Stuart, and nearly ruins the common cause, ii. 432.
- Patrick, Colonel, gallant conduct and death of, at Amarante, ii. 61.
- Prince, of the. (See Godoy.)
- Prince, Don, Prince Regent of Portugal. (See Portugal, Regency, &c.) Letter from Lord Wellington to, relative to the misconduct of the Regency, iv. 205.
- Peninsula, the. (See Spain, Portugal.) General sketch of the state of the war in, 1810, iii. 13. Review of the different changes of, 335. The French armies in, re-organized, 341. General observations on the operations in, at the commencement of 1812, 388. Napoleon's designs towards, on the breaking out of the Russian war, 448. The French and the English hospitals in, compared, iv. 105. England shown to have been the real deliverer of, 166, v. 216. Its safety secured by Napoleon's failure in Russia, iv. 181-2. The war in, becomes secondary in his policy, 210. Different organization of the French and English armies in, 235. Comparative state of, 251. Hatred of the English the only bond of union between the governments of, 466. Political condition of, at the close of 1813, v. 64, et seq. The war in, terminates with the evacuation of Barcelona, 107.
- Perceval, Mr., forms a new administration in England, iii. 199. His illiberal character, 200. His answer to Wellington's complaint of want of money, 220. Is killed in the House of Commons—his death not a public misfortune, 408. (See Controversial Pieces.)
- Peniscola is besieged by Suchet, iii. 302. Is surrendered through the treachery and cowardice of the governor, 303.
- Petit, Colonel, in command of a French convoy, is defeated and assassinated, ii. 208.
- Penrose, Admiral, is appointed to command the naval operations in the south of France, v. 88. Enters the Garonne, 167. Destroys the French flotilla and batteries, 168.
- Phillipon, General. (See Badajos.) His preparations to resist the third English siege of Badajos, iii. 353. Surrenders, after a heroic defence, 377.
- Piçon, General, compared with General Robert Crawford, ii. 381. (See Ciudad Rodrigo.) Observations on his movements in the battle of Vittoria, iv. 293. His position in the Pyrenees, 346. See 360, 365. Retires before Soult, 366. Turns and offers battle, 367. (See Sauroren.) Observations, 391. (See Orthes.) Attacks contrary to orders, and is defeated at the battle of Toulouse, v. 191. (See Controversial Pieces.)
- Pignatelli, General, commands a Castilian force at Lograno, i. 252. Retires from the place in disorder, abandoning all his guns, 254.
- Ponte Nova, the, terrible scene at, during Soult's retreat from Oporto, ii. 95.
- Popham, Sir Home, sent to superintend naval expeditions against the coasts of the Asturias and Biscay, ii. 383. Is sent with an armament to the coast of Biscay—absurd orders of ministers to, iii. 423. Important effects of his expedition, iv. 38, 108. See 126. Blockades Santona, 158. Quits the bay of Biscay, 159.
- Parlier, guerilla chief. (See Partidas.)
- Portugal, operation of the continental system in, i. 16. France and Spain make a secret treaty for its conquest and partition, 23. Provisions of, 34. French armies put in mo-

- tion for its invasion, 25. Is entered by Junot, 104. The royal family sails for the Brazils, 105. Pusillanimity of the Prince Regent, ib. Organization of the invading army, 106. (See Junot.) General insurrection against the French, 114. Proves more noisy than dangerous, 116. Napoleon's early designs against, and measures of the English ministry, 121, et seq. Proceedings in, 127, et seq. Evacuated by the French under the convention of Cintra, 162. Observations, 174. General plan of the campaign of, 1808, 177. Comparison between the Portuguese and Spanish people 186. In a state of complete anarchy, 428. (See Regency.) Its frontier indefensible by an inferior force, 438. Cradock contemplates abandoning the country, 446. Turbulence and excesses of the populace in consequence, 448. The command of the Portuguese armies offered to an English general, 450. Marshal Beresford receives the appointment, 451. Military polity of the country, it. Threatening attitude of the French armies, 453. States of the French army in, Jan. and May, 1808, App. i. 530. Extracts from Sir J. Cradock's correspondence relative to the state of, etc., 542, ii. 455. 457. Extracts relative to the neglect of, by the English ministers, in 1809, 465. States and distribution of the French army in, 466. States of the French army in, 1810-11, 485. Extracts from letters of Lord Wellington relative to the affairs of, 500. Instructions to Marshal Soult for the invasion of, ii. 12. Its defences on the Minho, 17. Soult prevented from crossing the Minho—important bearings of that event, 18. Anarchical state of the country, 21. Measures for defence, 21, et seq. Topography of the northern provinces, 24. Superior character of the peasants of those provinces, 29. Fall of Oporto, 37. The Anti-Braganza party make proposals to Soult for a French prince, 55. Insubordination in, 73. Enthusiasm excited by the arrival of Sir A. Wellesley, 75. Campaign of the Douro, and recovery of Oporto, 82, et seq. Its military resources and defences, 129. The French arrange a new invasion of, under Massena, 327. Wellington's views for the defence of, 335. Increased provisions made for, 337. State of parties in, in 1809-10, 352. Intrigues of the Souzas, 353. Hatred and jealousy of Spain in, 354. Description of the country, its lines of invasion and defence, 358. The plan of defence described and analyzed, 360, et seq. Difficulties of supplying the army, 364. Resources of the belligerents compared, 365. See 384. Description of the theatre of Massena's operations, 390. Third invasion of, 392. (See Wellington, Massena.) Observations, 409. Description of the lines of Torres Vedras, 416. Political troubles in, 424, et seq. Extracts from French correspondence relative to the operations of Massena in, 514, et seq. Massena's retreat from Santarem, iii. 46, et seq. Ill conduct of the government as to provisioning the army, 57. Its negligence in aiding Marshal Beresford, 73. Chances of a war with Spain, 204. Views of the political state of, 211, et seq. Famine and disorder in, 219. An additional subsidy granted by England, 220. The civil and military affairs of, slightly improved, 253. Further intrigues, 254. Expected invasion of, by Napoleon, 254-5, 274. Baulked by the Russian war, 275. Political state of, in October, 1811, 330. Disturbance produced by a pretended plot, 331. Character of the government, 357. Miserable state of its army, 432. Positions of the Generals at Santarem contrasted, 435. Minor military movements, 442, et seq. Observations, 446. The military system of, like to fall to pieces, through the conduct of the Regency, iv. 111. The coasts of, exposed to American privateers, by the reduction of the naval force, 185. Financial schemes proposed for, by various parties, ib. Their folly and injustice exposed by Lord Wellington and Mr. Stuart, 186, et seq. See 198. Disorders in the military system, 201. Efforts to render the English odious in, 202. Misconduct of the magistrates, 203. Slight effects produced by the efforts of Wellington and Stuart, 207. Dangerous discontent among the troops of, 259. Their noble conduct, on an appeal to their honor, 260. The British dépôts are transferred from, to Biscay, 271. Violence, folly, and ingratitude of the government of, 460, et seq. The recruits for Wellington's army from, withheld, v. 64.
- Privateers, British, mischief occasioned by, in Catalonia, iii. 178, App. 490.
- Pyrenees, the, Wellington holds the summit of, iv. 289. Relative position and numbers of the contending armies in, 346. Battles of, 356, et seq. Operations on, 387. (See Wellington, Soult.)
- RAGUSA, Duke of. (See Marmont)
- Reding, a Swiss, aids General Castaños in organizing his army, i. 87. His movements previous to the battle of Baylen, 90, 91. Wins that battle, and the French army surrenders, 92. Leads a body of Granadian levies to Tarragona, 395. Commands under Vives at the battle of Cardadeu, 402. His flight on the loss of that battle, 403. Joins Caldagues and rallies his forces, 404. Gives battle to St. Cyr at Molino del Rey, and is utterly routed, 405. Succeeds Vives as commander-in-chief in Catalonia, 407. Murmurs of the people against him, 409. Strength and composition of his army, ib. His divisions beaten in detail by St. Cyr, 411-12. Is again defeated in the battle of Vallis, and flees wounded to Tarragona, 414-15. Dies—his character 417.
- Reeves, Colonel, brilliant exploit of, at the battle of Castalla, falsely attributed to Colonel Adam, iv. 229. Succeeds that officer at the combat of Ordal, and is wounded, 326.
- Regency, the Portuguese, anarchy produced by their weakness and inefficiency, i. 428. Dread insurrection more than the return of the French, 420. Deprive the Spanish dollar of its current value, producing a great disturbance, 431. Their reluctance to forward

- military preparations, 434. Offer the command of their armies to an English general, 450. Marshal Beresford appointed, 451. Its composition in 1809-10, ii. 353. Intrigues of parties in, ib. et seq. Apply to England for an additional subsidy 424. Neglect measures of defence, 430. Weakness and inefficiency of, iii. 212. Changes in, 214-15. The Souza faction becomes predominant in, 216. Grossly violate the convention of Cintra, 220. Starve their army, and neglect their fortifications, 237. Endeavor to get rid of the British army, 254. Neglect their part in preparations for the expected approach of Napoleon, 255. Their factious course towards Wellington, 368, et seq. Their opposition to his measures, and neglect of their own duties, 397. His rebuke, 398. Shameful device of, to avoid feeding their troops iv. 111. Harassing opposition of, to Wellington's views, 199. Instances of the corruption of, 200. Terrified at the approach of republicanism, 203. Letter from Wellington to the Prince Regent, relative to the misconduct of, 205. Insolence and ingratitude of, towards the British, 461-2. Complaints of, as to the treatment of their troops, 463. Withhold the recruits from Wellington's army, v. 64. Their duplicity and ingratitude, 65.
- Regency. Spanish, organized at Cadiz on the dissolution of the Supreme Junta, ii. 273. (See Spain.) Secretly organize and encourage the guerilla bands, 349. Injustice and absurdity of, towards the colonies, 350. Invite the Duke of Orleans to command the border provinces, iii. 22. Reconstituted by the Cortes, 23. Dissensions with, 202. Extravagant demands of, in consideration of receiving British officers in their armies, 268. Send expeditions against the colonies, fitted out with English supplies intended for the defence of Galicia, 272. Refuse an exchange of prisoners at Cabrera, 299. Is re-organized and the members changed, 329. No improvement results, 330. Extracts from manifestos of, Jan., 1812, App. 489. Resist the decree of the Cortes abolishing the Inquisition, iv. 194. The members of, changed, and Cardinal Bourbon made President, 195. Are the slaves of the Cortes, 470. Determine to remove the seat of government, but are baffled by the Cadiz newspapers, 471. Violate their engagements with Wellington a generalissimo, 472. He opposes the dismissal of his enemies in, v. 69. (See Cortes, Ferdinand.)
- Reille, General, marches to the aid of the French in Catalonia, i. 65. Relieves Figueras and invests Rosas, but is forced to retire, 66. Besieges Rosas, 396. The place surrenders after thirty days' investment, 399. Combat with the Marquis of Lazan, 408. Is replaced by General Verdier, ii. 211. Is appointed to command the "army of the Ebro," 341. Operations of, against the partidas, 426. Returns to Navarre, 431. See iv. 126. Takes command of the army of Portugal, 158. His position, 232, 233. Reinforces Caffarelli, 237. Is deceived by the allies' movements, 265. Concentrates his forces, and retreats towards Burgos, 267. (See Vittoria.) Marches to the Bidassoa, 286. Commands the right wing in Soult's army in the Pyrenees, 346. His tardy movements at the combat of Roncevalles, 359. (See Sauroren.) Holds the lower Bidassoa, 396. Is worsted in the combat of San Marcial, 422. Is attacked by Wellington, 438. Retreats in disorder, 440. (See Nivelle, Nive, Barrouillet.)
- Renovalles, guerilla chief in Aragon. (See Partidas.)
- Retiro, the. (See Madrid.)
- Rey, General Emanuel, governor of San Sebastian, his obstinate defence of, 332, et seq.; 397, et seq. Surrenders, 413.
- Reynier, General. See ii. 277. Takes command of the second corps in Estremadura, 317. His movements against different divisions of Romana's army, 318. Examines the works of Badajos, in face of the whole Spanish army, 319. Observations on his movements, 320. Passes the Tagus, and is followed by General Hill, 383. Makes various demonstrations, 384. See 389. Joins in the invasion of Portugal, 393. (See Massena, Busaco.) Is discomfited in a desperate combat at Sabugal, iii. 64.
- Richmond, the Duke of, is wounded at the battle of Orthes, v. 146.
- Ridge, Colonel, desperate assault and death of, at the storming of Badajos, iii. 371.
- Rio Seco, battle of, between Bessières and Cuesta, i. 81.
- Romana, the Marquis of, arrives in Spain with a Spanish force from Denmark, i. 231. Manner of their escape from the French service, ib. His troops serve under General Blake at Espinosa, 264. Are taken prisoners there, and four thousand of them found in Russia in 1812, 268. Takes command of the remnant of Blake's army after his defeat at Reynosa, ib. Their miserable condition, 309. His character, ib. His exaggerated promises to Sir John Moore, ib. Keeps away from him for fear of exposing their condition, 311. Causes great loss and confusion to Moore's army by pre-occupying Astorga during the retreat, 319. His army dispersed, ib. His operations after the embarkation of the English army, ii. 14. His efforts to raise a new force hindered by desertion and the apathy of the Galicians, 15. Is joined by General Silveira, 22. His ignorance and unfitness for command, 23. Is defeated at Monterey and retreats, abandoning Silveira, 26. Observations, 71. Surprises Villa Franca, 101. Repairs to the Asturias to reform abuses, 102. Is surprised by Marshal Ney, and escapes on board an English vessel, 103. Rejoins his army and marches to Orence, 104. Ney and Soult combine against, 109. Is saved by a misunderstanding between those Marshals, 111. His description of the conduct of the Central Junta, 126. Delivers his command to the Duke del Parque, and goes

- to Seville, 187. Foils a project of the Junta for a new form of government, and proposes another, 235. Refuses the command of the army in the Morena, 263. Is restored to his old command, and proceeds to Badajos, 270, 316. Is joined by Del Parque, and distributes his army to act against the communications of the French, 317. Makes a demonstration against Merida, 318. Encamps near Badajos, where a plot to assassinate him is discovered, 319. Observations on his movements, 320. Is threatened by Mortier, and concentrates his troops, 384. Defeated at Benvenida, 3-6. Is beaten by Mortier, and retreats to Elvas, 396. Joins Wellington in Portugal, 421. Is removed by the Regency, but reinstated at the solicitation of Wellington, iii. 23. Sends succors to Olivenza, 29. Death and character of, 30.
- Roncevalles, combat of, iv. 356. Extracts from the reports of General Cole and Marshal Soult on, App. 512.
- Rorica, combat of, between Sir A. Wellesley and General Laborde, i. 145. Observations on, 174.
- Rosas invested by General Reille, but relieved by Juan Claros, i. 66. Siege of, 396. Exploit of Lord Cochrane at, 398. Capitulates after thirty days' investment, 399.
- Ross, General, arrives at Carthage in command of a British force, iii. 435.
- Rovigo, Duke of. (See Savary.)
- Rovira. (See Catalonia.) Important exploit of, in the surprise of the fort of Fernando de Figueras, iii. 148. Fails in an attempt to introduce a convoy, 150. Is betrayed in another attempt, and the place surrenders, 179.
- Rueda, fraternization of the French and English soldiers in the wine caves of, iv. 40.
- Russia, causes of the war with Napoleon in, iii. 445-6. Grandeur of his expedition to, iv. 182. Its failure, the safety of the Peninsula, ib.
- SAAVEDRA, Don Miguel de, governor of Valencia, is killed by the citizens in cold blood, i. 36.
- Saguntum, siege of, iii. 279. Battle of, between Blake and Suchet, 287. Surrenders, 288. Observations, ib.
- Sahagun, advance of Sir John Moore to, i. 306, et seq. Combat at, 311.
- St. Aignan, negotiations of, with the allied powers, for a general peace, v. 79.
- St. Jago de Compostella, its communications with Portugal, ii. 16.
- St. Julian, General, holds the pass of the Somosierra against Napoleon, i. 279. His force put to flight by a charge of Polish cavalry, ib. Is brutally murdered by his men, 280.
- St. Cyr, General Gouvion, is sent to Catalonia in command of the seventh corps, i. 392.
- Besieges Rosas, 396. That place surrenders, and he proceeds to the relief of Barcelona, 399. His hazardous march, 400. Defeats the Spanish army at Cardadeu, 402. Reaches Barcelona, 403. Defeats Reding at Molino del Rey, 405. Neglects to follow up his advantage, 407. His operations against Reding, 411. Defeats him with great loss at Valls, 414. Blockades Tarragona, 415. His inactivity, 416. Retreats to Barcelona, 417. His measures at that place, 420. Marshal Augereau is appointed to supersede him, 421. Observations, ib. His remarks on the guerilla system, ii. 209. His discontent, 211. Refuses to obey Joseph's orders to march into Aragon, and urges on the siege of Gerona, 212. Takes a position to cover the siege, 213. (See Gerona.) Intercepts a reinforcement for Gerona, 217. His operations against Blake's relieving army, 221, et seq. Errors in his movements, 225. Cuts off a convoy, 228. Delivers the command to Augereau, 229.
- Salamanca, rejoicing in, on the approach of Wellington, iv. 28. Siege of the forts of, ib. They surrender, 35. Are destroyed, 36. Battle of, 56. Last event and anecdotes of, 61-4. Observations on, 80. Important results of, 81. Extracts relative to the movements of the cavalry at, App. 479. Strength of the Anglo-Portuguese army and number of guns at, 503. Loss of the allies before and at, 503. The French and English armies reassembled on the plains of, 144. Hatred of the British shown by the Spaniards at—instances of their ferocity, 146.
- St. Pierre, battle of, between General Hill and Marshal Soult, v. 47. Great loss of British officers at, 50. Observations on, 53.
- San Carlos, the Duke of, secretly arrives at Madrid with the treaty of Valengay, v. 70. Is dismissed, with a decree rejecting it, ib.
- Sanchez Julian, breaks through the besieging force of Ney, with two hundred horsemen, from Ciudad Rodrigo, ii. 329. Captures the governor of Ciudad, and a convoy for its relief, 333.
- San Genis, Colonel, chief engineer at the defence of Zaragoza, is killed at the same moment as the French engineer, i. 381.
- San Marcial, combat of, between Generals Reille and Freyre, iv. 422.
- San Sebastian is besieged by General Graham, iv. 288. See 295. Description of, 331. Preparations for its defence, 332. Force of the besiegers, 334. Assault of San Bartolomeo, 336. Assault of the town, 339. Causes of its failure, 341. The siege turned into a blockade, 342. The garrison makes a successful sally, 343. The siege renewed, 399. State of the defences, 403. Storming of the town, 406. Is carried, 410. Horrible scene of depravity, 411. Is burnt, ib. The castle bombarded, 412. Surrenders, 413. Observations on the siege, ib. On the sacking and burning of the town, 415.

- Santander the English dépôts transferred from Portugal to, iv. 271. Barbarous treatment of the English hospitals at, v. 92.
- Santarem is occupied by Marshal Massena, ii. 433. et seq. Description of, 436. Relative state of the French and English armies at, iii. 43. Massena retreats from, 46.
- Santona is blockaded by sea and land, iv. 153. Is succored by Caffarelli, 159. Remains the only fortress in possession of the French in the north of Spain, 460. History of the operations against, v. 108. Is surrendered at the close of the war, 111.
- Santocildes, General, takes possession of Astorga, ii. 237. Assumes the command of Galicia during Castaños' absence, iii. 113. See 115. Besieges Astorga, iv. 37. Marches to the Duero, 66. Occupies Valladolid, 105. Abandons it on the approach of Clausel, 106. Avoids a junction with Wellington, 112.
- Sarsfield, General, defeats General Eugenio and Palombini at Pla, iii. 140. Harasses Macdonald's march to Barcelona, 147. See 158, 159. Enters Tarragona, and takes command of the Mole, 161. Is forced by Contreras to leave the place, at the moment of the assault, 167. See 281-2-3. Is defeated by Decaen at Centellas, 302. Menaces Tarragona—is again defeated by Decaen, 430. Again by General Lamarque, 431. Rejoins Lacy, ib. His command increased, but himself calumniated by Lacy, iv. 85. Becomes hateful to the people, 86. Acts as a partisan on the Ebro, 166. (See Bentinck, Clinton.) Repulses General Hubert in two sallies from Barcelona, which are the last events of the war in Spain, v. 106, 107.
- Sauroren, first battle of, between Soult and Wellington, iv. 371. Second do., 377.
- Savary, General, Duke of Rovigo, is sent to Madrid to conduct the Emperor's plans, i. 27. Delicacy of his position, 49. Fails in the execution of his mission, 51. His mischievous errors, 79. Napoleon's instructions to him, ib.
- Scott, Sir Walter, reply to a criticism of, upon the author's account of Lord Strangford's proceedings, v. 229.
- Sebastiani, General, succeeds the Duke of Dantzic in command of the fourth-corps, i. 366. Occupies Toledo, ii. 41. Routs Cartoajal at Ciudad Real, 43. Joins the King on the Guadarama, 148. Defeats General Venegas at Almonacid, 178. Attacks General Areizaga's advanced guard at Dos Barrios, 244. (See Ocaña.) Is directed to seize the Granadan coast, 271. Puts down an insurrection, and takes possession of Malaga, 273. His operations in Granada, iii. 18, 19.
- Serbelloni, the Conde de, Captain-General of Valencia, organizes an army, i. 37. Marches to intercept the French communications, 74. Is defeated and his troops dispersed by Marshal Moncey, 75.
- Seville, the local government of, assumes the title of "Supreme Junta of Spain and the Indies," and declares war against King Joseph, i. 35. Assassination at, 36. Anarchy in, on the approach of the French, ii. 269. The old Junta of, re-established, but again disbanded, 270. Surrenders to the King, 272. Cadiz saved by the ephemeral resistance of, 275. Is evacuated by Soult, iv. 101.
- Sicilian armament, the arrives at Alicante, iv. 92. Important effect of its presence on the French operations, 160. Falls into disrepute with the Spaniards, 162. Disorders in, 222. Results of the foolish arrangements of the ministers in regard to, 225. Changes commanders seven times in fifteen months, 432. Desertion of Italian soldiers from—letter from Wellington, App. 489. (See Bentinck, Maitland, &c.)
- Sicily, proceedings of Lord William Bentinck in, iii. 435. Sir J. Moore's plan for the government of, rejected, but justified by the ultimate result, 439. Danger of an invasion of, by the French, averted by Murat's defection, iv. 313. Justificatory pieces relative to, App. 505.
- Silveira, General, assumes command of the Tras os Montes, and acts in concert with Romana, ii. 22. Is abandoned by, 26. Defeated at Chaves, 27. Re-takes the place, 35. Advances into the Entre Minho e Douro, 57. Successfully opposes General Loi on, 59. Menaces Oporto, but is driven back, 61. Observations, 72. (See Wellesley.) Is left in defence of the northern provinces, 107. Captures a Swiss regiment at Puebla de Senabria, 386. Blockades Almeida, 443-4. Attacks a convoy under General Gardanne, 444. Is defeated by General Claparede, and driven over the Douro, 445. Marches to Lamego—his vanity, iii. 383. See 384, iv. 37. Invests Zamora, iv. 104. Is driven away by General Foy, 107. Commands an infantry division on the Aguada, 260. Serves under Hill in the Pyrenees, 346, 353. Desires the chief command of the Portuguese army, in place of Beresford, 464. Objected to by Wellington as factious and incapable, 466.
- Sinavin, Admiral, with a Russian squadron, takes refuge in the Tagus from the British fleet, i. 110. An English expedition is sent against him, 122. Capitulates to Sir Charles Cotton, 160.
- Skerrett, Colonel, goes to Tarragona with reinforcements, but does not land, iii. 170. Observations thereon, 182. Carries a British force from Cadiz to Tarifa, 309. Makes an effort to capture the French battering train, 315. Not the author of the defence of Tarifa, 320, et seq. See App. 537, et seq. Skirmishes with Soult's rear-guard at Seville, iv. 102. Marches to the Duero, 104. Joins Hill, 141. Repulses an attack on the position of, ib. Neglects a great advantage in the Pyrenees, 428. Goes to England, 433.
- Smith, Sir Charles, captain of engineer, the merit of the defence of Tarifa due to, iii. 322-3

- Extractive to his conduct at, App. 538. From the report of, 542. His plan for the siege of St. Sebastian, iv. 334, 337. Disastrous result of the disregard of, 341.
- Slade, General, is defeated in a rash attack with cavalry upon General Lallemand, iii. 444.
- Smith, Colonel Sir George, employed in negotiations for the occupation of Cadiz; i. 124. Renews them in 1809, 440. Dies when on the point of success, 443.
- Smith, Sir Sidney, commander of the British fleet at Lisbon, vainly urges the court to resist the entrance of Junot, i. 105. Induces the Prince Regent to embark, but is denied the credit of the action, 106.
- Solano y Socoro, the Marquis of, commanding a Spanish force in Portugal, is recalled by Godoy, i. 35. Is murdered for refusing to attack the French squadron at Cadiz, 36.
- Somatenes, armed peasants of Catalonia, origin of their name, i. 61.
- Somerset, Lord Fitzroy, (afterwards Lord Raglan,) military secretary to Lord Wellington, the prudence and ability of, iii. 341. Receives the surrender of the governor of Badajos, 377.
- Somosierra, the pass of, forced by Napoleon, i. 279.
- Souham, General, (see Catalonia, Gerona, etc.,) overcomes superior numbers in a combat at Vich, ii. 283. Is appointed to command the army of Portugal, iv. 124-5. Marches against Wellington to raise the siege of Burgos, 127. Should have forced on a battle, 128. Is prohibited from doing so by the King, 131. Extract from his despatch relative to, App. 490. Pursues Wellington, 132. Fights with his rear-guard at Venta de Pozo, 133. His progress checked by the destruction of bridges on the Pisuerga, 138. Repairs the bridge of Toro, forcing Wellington to change his line of retreat, 143-4. Is superseded by General Drouet, 147. Returns to France, 158.
- Soult, Marshal, Duke of Dalmatia, is appointed to command the second corps in place of Bessières, i. 265. Defeats the Comde de Belvedere at Gamonal, 266. Disperses Blake's army after his defeat at Espinosa, 268. Overruns Leon, 269. Concentrates his force on the Carrico, 310. Pursues Sir John Moore in conjunction with the Emperor, 314. Is left at Astorga, to conduct the pursuit alone, 320. His vigorous movements, 321. Skirmishes at Lugo, but refuses battle, 327. His dispositions on reaching Coruña, 332. Battle of Coruña, 335. Extract of a letter from, to the author, App. 515. Coruña and Ferrol surrender to him, ii. 12. Receives instructions for the invasion of Portugal, ib. His preparations, 14. Marches for Oporto, 16. Attempts to pass the Minho at Campo Saucos, 17. Is prevented by the ordenanzas, 18. His situation embarrassing, ib. Adopts a new line, and defeats large bodies of insurgents, 19. Leaves most of his artillery and encumbrances at Tuy, and concentrates at Orense, 20. Enters Portugal, 25. Defeats Romana at Monterey, 26. Defeats Silveira, and takes the town of Chaves, 27. Permits his prisoners to return to their homes, ib. Good results of this proceeding, 28. Marches upon Braga, ib. Murder and confusion in that place, 29, et seq. Defeats the Portuguese there under Baron Eben, 33. Concentrates his forces in front of Oporto, 35. Urges the Bishop to surrender, 36. The place taken with terrible slaughter, 37, et seq. Pursues a conciliatory policy towards the inhabitants, 54. Receives addresses in favor of the establishment of a French government, 55. Good effects of his policy, 56. His general position, and succeeding operations, 57, et seq. Observations, 70. Is kept in ignorance of Wellesley's approach by conspirators in his army, 78. Discovers the conspiracy, 80. Prepares to retreat, 83. Retires from Oporto as Wellesley enters it, 89. His desperate situation, 92. Displays great energy and generalship, 92-3. Enters Orense in an exhausted condition, 96. Observations, ib. Marches upon Lugo, 101. Combines operations with Ney, in Galicia, 109. Has a misunderstanding with Ney, 111. Retires to Zamora to recruit, 112. Is appointed to the supreme command of the second, fifth, and sixth corps, 145. Proposes to the King to besiege Ciudad Rodrigo, and menace Lisbon, ib. Marches to Salamanca, 147. Advances to Placentia, 168. Learns the perilous position of the allies, 169. Defeats Cuesta at Arzobispo, 173. His plans overruled by Marshal Ney and the King, 174-5. His operations against General Areizaga, 243. His dispositions, 245, et seq. Destroys the Spanish army at the battle of Ocaña, 249. Directs the movements in the invasion of Andalusia, 267, et seq. (See Andalusia) Becomes chief commander of, on the withdrawal of Joseph, 304. Establishes a stable government there, 321. Excites the hatred of the King by refusing his demands, ib. States of his army, in 1810-11, App. 488. Assumes the direction of the blockade of Cadiz, iii. 25. Is ordered to aid Massena in Portugal, 26. His arrangements for holding Andalusia, 27. Marches into Estremadura, and besieges Olivenza, 28. The place surrenders, and he marches against Badajos, 29. Siege of that place, 30. Defeats Mendizabel at the battle of the Gebora, 33-4. Badajos is surrendered by the treachery of the governor, 43. Returns to Andalusia, ib., 70. Marches against Beresford, to succor Badajos, 92. Arrives at Albuera, 94. His dispositions, 95. Battle of Albuera, 96. Dreadful state of his army at the close of, 101. Retreats to Solano, 102. Assumes a position at Llerena, 103. His errors in the battle, 108. Is reinforced, and makes a forward movement, 232. Is joined by Marmont, and they enter Badajos, 234. Advances against Wellington, ib. Declines to give battle, 236. See App. 548-9. Marches to Seville against Blake, expels him, and defeats the Spaniards in Niebla and Granada, 240, et seq. His vigor and ability, 242. His position described, 205. Amount of his force, 307. Enters into a treaty with the Emperor of Morocco, but it is frustrated by the English, 308-9. Resolves to besiege Tarifa, 309. His plans unsettled by the failures of his subordinates, 310, et seq. Sends Laval against Tarifa, 314. The siege fails, 320. His opinion of its importance, 321. See 358. Embarrassments, 366. Advances from Cordova against Wellington, 367-8, 379. Hears of the fall of Badajos and counter marches against the Spaniards in his rear, 380. Reaches Seville by forced marches, 381. Observations on his proceedings, 393. See 418, 440. His vast but well considered plans, 441. Restores the French interest in Morocco, 442. Bombards Cadiz, ib. Opposes the plans of the King, iv. 15. Recommends others, and refuses to obey him, 16. Is deceived in regard to the movements of the British army, 17. See 69. Receives orders to evacuate Andalusia, 70. Objects, 71. Joseph demands the recall of, from the Emperor, who defends him, 74. Observations on his conduct and military character, 78. Remonstrance of, against the evacuation of Andalusia, 97, App. 481. Urges Joseph to unite the armies there, 98. Expresses suspicions of the integrity of, in a letter intercepted by, 99; copy of, App. 482. Breaks up the blockade of Cadiz, and marches towards Granada, 101. Difficulties of his march, 102. Arrives at Hellin and effects a juncture with the King and Suchet, 103. Ability of his movement, ib. Joseph reluctantly gives him the command, 130. Reduces the fort of Chinchilla, ib. Part of his army is given to Drouet, 139-40. Moves upon Ocaña and Aranjuez, 140. The King is discontented with his caution, 141. Pursues Hill—is joined by the King, 143. Cannonades the castle of Alba de Tormes, 146. Opposes Joseph's desire of giving battle, 147. His plan is adopted, 148. Passes the Tormes, 149. Failure of his plan—his want of promptness, 150. Pursues Wellington to the Huebra—combat there, 152. Ceases the pursuit, 154. Takes winter quarters about Toledo, 156. Observations, 176. Joseph's complaints against him, 213. Is recalled, and made commander of the Imperial Guard, 214. His command given to General Gazan, 221. His advice to the King for future operations, 236. Succeeds Joseph as Napoleon's lieutenant, after the battle of Vittoria, 343. Amount of his force, 343, 345, App. 518. Revives the confidence of the soldiers, 345. Makes dispositions for a great offensive movement, 346. Resolves to succor Pampeluna, 348. His plans, ib. His theatre of operations described, 350. Issues a remarkable order of the day, 356. Attacks the right of the allies, 357. The result unsatisfactory, 358. Impediments to his movements, 359. Secretly anticipates failure, 360. Approaches Pampeluna, and is nearly successful, 366. Is stopped by General Cole—prepares for battle, 367. His position described, 369. First battle of Sauroren, 371. Is joined by D'Erlon, 374. Makes dispositions with a view to relieve Sa Sebastian, 375. Attacks General Hill, and turns his position, 376. Second battle of Sauroren, 377. His loss enormous, 378. Retreats, 379. His dangerous position at San Estevan, 381. Is wounded by an accident, and continues the retreat, 382. Terrible scene at the bridge of Yenzi, 383. Amount of his losses, 387. Observations on his movements, 390, 392. Adopts a permanent position, 396. His views and proceedings during the siege of San Sebastian, 417. His preparations for succoring, 419. A series of combats take place along his line, 422, et seq. Resolves to adopt a defensive system, 426. Remarks on his movements and situation, 427. His position described, 433. Is deceived by the movements of Wellington, 435, 438. Loses his camps on the Bidassoa by surprise, 439. Meets General Reille in retreat, 440. See 442, et seq. Strength of his works—feebleness of their defence, 446. Retakes the redoubt of Sarre, 447. His numbers, 448. His intrenchments described, 449. Desires to take the offensive, 450. Fails to induce Suchet to unite with him, 451, et seq. Superiority of his plan over Suchet's, 454-5. Letter from the Minister of War to Joseph impugning the fidelity of, App. 455. Extracts from his report of the combat of Roncevalles, 512. His political difficulties, v. 9. Prepares to defend his positions, 11. His dispositions, 13. Battle of the Nivelle, 16. Retreats to the intrenched camps of Bavonne and the Nive, 24. Observations, ib. See 29, 33. His positions on the Nive surprised by Wellington, 34-5. Prepares to fall upon one of his separated wings, 36. His attack repulsed, 43. Three of his German regiments go over to the allies, ib. Renews the attack with some success, 44. Marches to attack Hill, 45. Battle of St. Pierre, 47. Is defeated, 50. Observations, 51. The errors of the campaign not his own, 53. His situation and views, 57. General movements, 59, et seq. His embarrassments, 112, et seq. Proposes a great project for the defence of France, 116. Napoleon's probable reasons for its rejection, 118. His force much reduced, 119. Makes arrangements for resisting the advance of Wellington, 122. Is deceived as to the numbers of, 123. See passage of the Gaves, 124, et seq. Resolves to change his system of operations, 129. Concentrates his army and takes a defensive position at Orthes, 139. Battle of Orthes, 142. Is nearly victorious, 143. Orders a general retreat, 145. Changes his line of operations, 146. Retreats up the Adour, 145. Observations, ib. His situation extremely perilous, 155. Complains of the ill-will of the inhabitants, 156. Takes post at Tarbes, ib. Napoleon sends him instructions, ib. His reply, 157. Reorganizes his army, 158. His proclamation, 159. Defence of, 161. State of his army, 169, 170. Menaces Wellington, 171. Retires, 173. Prepares to retreat on Toulouse, 174. Various skirmishes, 175, et seq. Reaches Toulouse, 179. Proves himself an able commander, ib. Indifference of Suchet to the appeals of, 180. Advantages of his position at Toulouse, 181, et seq. Resolves not to abandon it, 185. His combinations crowned with success, 187. Disposition of his army, 189. Battle of Toulouse, 190

Appeals again to Suchet, 196. Abandons the city, ib. Hears of Napoleon's abdication, but refuses to capitulate until it is confirmed, 197. General observations—defence of his conduct, 200. His operations at Toulouse reviewed, 203, et seq. Eulogy on his campaign, 209.

Southey, false charges of, against the French during Massena's retreat, iii. 57.

Souza, Principal, Antonio, becomes a member of the Portuguese Regency, ii. 353. His intrigues and those of his family, 353-4. Their factious conduct, 437. Excite the animosity of the populace against the British, 428. Exposure of their plot against Wellington and Beresford, 429. (See Regency.)

Spain. (For detail of events, see names of generals, provinces, &c.) Naturally friendly to Napoleon, but estranged by his invasion and usurpation, i. 17. Involved in ruin by the dissensions of the royal family, 22. Makes a secret treaty with France for the conquest and division of Portugal, 23. Entered by French armies in conformity therewith, 25. Sinister position and numbers of, 26. Charles IV. and Ferdinand both place themselves in the power of the Emperor, 27, 28. French power established in, without a blow struck, 28. Great tumult against, at Madrid, 30; followed by insurrections throughout the country, 32. Joseph Bonaparte chosen King at the Emperor's desire, 33. Constitution prepared by Napoleon adopted by the "Assembly of Notables" at Bayonne, ib. War declared by the Junta of Seville, 35. Insurrection organized in all the provinces, 36. The movement attributable to other causes than the pure virtue of the nation, 38, et seq. Necessity of English support, 41. Military system of, 44. The northern provinces quelled by Bessières 54. Pretensions of the Prince of Sicily to the regency of—curious proceedings in relation to, 126. The people of, compared with those of Portugal, 186. Intrinsic weakness and vindictive character of the insurrection, 187. The armies scattered without object after the battle of Baylen, 193. Council of generals at Madrid—their plan of operations, 199. Internal political transactions—dissensions and corruption of the juntas &c., 201. Plans and intrigues for the formation of a central government, 206, et seq. Central Junta assembles at Aranjuez, 210. All expectations therefrom disappointed, 212. External political relations, 214. Military operations previous to Napoleon's arrival, 234. Absence of concert and connection between the armies, 235. Arrogance and presumption of the generals, 236. Desperate condition of the Spanish cause after Napoleon's campaign, 362. Disposition of the French armies in, at that time, 363. Military condition of, 367. Advance of Sir John Moore into, 306, et seq. Observations of Napoleon, Joseph, and Berthier upon the affairs of, in 1808, App. 461, et seq. Extracts from correspondence of Sir John Moore and others relative to the state of, in 1808-9, 501, et seq. 539. Letters from Mr. Canning to Mr. Frere, 516. States of the armies of, in 1808, 536. Of the French armies in, 527. Do. in 1809, 535. Position of the French and Spanish armies in March, 1809, ii. 40. Nature of the country on the banks of the Tagus, 41. Plans of the Spanish general, 42. The spirit of the people sustained by the inactivity of the French generals, 53. Observations, 63, et seq. Effect of the war in Germany upon the operations in, 105. Strength and position of the French armies in June, 119. Unwarranted boasting of the Spaniards, 120. The Spanish power, ib. Intrigues of Mr. Frere, 121-2. (See Junta.) The partidas, their character and organization, 127. Campaign of Talavera, 132, et seq. Singular position of the various armies after the battle of, 169. General observations, 187, et seq. Projects for a new form of government, 233. Military operations resumed, 236. Rash movement of the Junta against Madrid, 241. Position of the French armies, 243. Close of the third epoch of the war, 257. Observations, ib. The Central Junta dissolved, 270. A Regency established, 273. Misuse of the naval and military power in the south of, 313. Situation and movements of the armies north of the Tagus in February, 1810 323. Reflections upon the Spanish military character, 330. Diverse policy of Joseph and Napoleon in the government of, 344. The military governments of the latter, 346. Strength and distribution of the French armies in, in July, 1810, 348. General state of, 349. (See Regency, Spanish) Slight operations in various parts, 382. Extracts from letters of Lord Wellington relative to the affairs of, App. 476, et seq., 490. From correspondence of King Joseph, 498. Operations in Galicia and the Asturias, iii. 13. In Granada and Murcia, 18. In the kingdom of Seville, 20. The National Cortes assembles in the Isla de Leon, Cadiz, 21. (See Cortes, Regency.) Operations in the northern provinces, continued, 112. Activity of the partidas in, 113. Operations in the eastern provinces, 115. The armies of, reorganized and designated by numbers, 118. Effect produced by the fall of Tarragona, 177. Political position of King Joseph, 186 (See Joseph.) The French organization in, rearranged, 191. Arrogance and rapacity excited in, by the ill-judged subsidies of England, 195. Political state of—disputes among the leaders, 202. Points of interest in the affairs of, affecting England, 203. Chances of a war with Portugal, 204. Intrigues of the Princess Carlotta, ib. Difficulties with the colonies, 205. English succors employed for their subjection, 207. Wellington's views in regard to, 206, et seq. Inactivity of the Spaniards at a most important crisis, 239. State of the war in, on the withdrawal of Soult and Marmont from Badajoz, 244. Favorable aspect of French affairs in, 246. State of the war in the northern provinces, September, 1811, 268. The internal difficulties of, fostered by the course of the English government, 271. Conquest of Va

- lencia, 275. Political state of, in 1811-12, 326. Dislike of England in, 327, 330. A new Regency formed, 329. The independence of, won by the efforts of England, 336. The French armies in, re-organized, and reduced 341. General movements in, on the taking of Ciudad Rodrigo, 352-3. General observations, 388. French operations against the partidas, 421, et seq. Political state of, 451. Proceedings relative to the colonies, ib. Failure of the English mediation, 452-3. Succession to the crown settled, 453. Military resources exhausted, 454. Foreign policy of, ib. Plan of enlisting Spanish soldiers in the British ranks fails, 455. Secret intercourse of Joseph with the Cortes, 456. Justificatory pieces relative to the state of, at different periods, 1810-12, App. 430. Correspondence of Canning and Stuart relative to, in 1808, 521. Summary of the French force at different periods in 1811, 556. In May, 1812, iv 13. Conduct of the armies in, 23-4. Campaign of 1812, 27. Position of the French and English armies on the Duero, 36. Fraternization of the soldiers of, 40. State of the military affairs in, after the battle of Salamanca, 68-9. Observations, 75. State of the war, 84. Inefficiency of the soldiers of, after five years' war, 108. The northern provinces ripe for insurrection, ib. Pecuniary distress and general position of the armies on both sides, 124, et seq. Wellington appointed commander-in-chief of, 129. The French and the allies take winter quarters, 156. Continuation of the partisan warfare, 158. The French completely invested in the interior of, 166. General observations, 167. Campaign of 1812 critically examined, 169, et seq. The French operations analyzed, 176. The armies of, reorganized at the suggestion of Lord Wellington, 193. Factious opposition to the decree abolishing the Inquisition, 194. Secret negotiations of the Cortes and the military with Joseph, 196. The French armies in, reduced and weakened, 211. The partidas become more disciplined and effective, ib. French military positions, 214. Joseph's civil and military policy in, ib. Operations south of the Tagus, in 1813, 218. Absurd reports circulated in the French armies, 220. Operations north of the Tagus, 232. The northern insurrection, 239. Comparative state of the contending forces in, with reference to the coming campaign, 250, et seq. Commencement of the campaign of 1813, 259. The whole northern frontier of, occupied by the victorious allies, 289. Observations, ib. Operations on the eastern coast, continued, 296. (See Pyrenees.) Fortresses possessed by the French in, after the expulsion of Joseph, 432. (See Santona.) Unfriendly feeling of Portugal towards, 466. Political state of, in 1813—various factions described, 467. Wellington expects civil war in, 468. Projects of the Jacobins, 470. A new Cortes assembled, and removes the seat of government to Madrid, 471. A terrible convulsion threatened, 472. Gross neglect of the subsistence of the army, 473. Corrupt and reckless character of all in authority, 475. General states of the French armies in, 1812-13, App. 500, 517. Extracts from correspondence relative to the state of, 511. The troops of, are sent home by Wellington, for their excesses in the south of France, v 31. The state of, continued, 65. Wellington recommends the English ministers to prepare for war with, 66. Political intrigues and discord, 68. (See Valençay.) The government of, not without reason for their hostility to England, 75. Barbarous treatment of the English hospitals in, 92. Continuation of the war in the eastern part of, 94. Is re-entered by Ferdinand as King, 106. The war in, terminates with the evacuation of Barcelona, 107. Inability of, to shake off Napoleon, made apparent, 108.
- Spaniards, general character of, i 39. Their agreeable but deceptive qualities, 42. Compared with the Portuguese, 186.
- Spencer, General, see i 36, 87. Sent with an armament to the Peninsula, 122. Manifold objects of his expedition, 123. Fails in the negotiation for the occupation of Cadiz, ib. Joins Sir Charles Cotton for an attack upon Lisbon, which is abandoned, 125. Joins Sir Arthur Wellesley in Portugal, 136. Takes command of the army in the north of Portugal, iii 70. His operations round Almeida and Ciudad Rodrigo, 78. In Beira, 232. Marches to the Alentejo, 233. Joins Wellington, 234.
- Squire, Captain of Engineers, extracts from correspondence of, relative to Beresford's siege of Badajos, App. iii 479.
- Stewart, General William, enters Cadiz with an English force, ii 308. Recovers Matagorda, 309. Gives up the command to General Graham, ib. Invests Badajos, iii 90. His rash charge at the battle of Albuera, 97. Commands under Hill in the Pyrenees, iv 353. His position, 360. Takes command at the combat of Maya, 362. The disastrous character of, owing to his want of precaution, 363. Is wounded, 381. (See St. Pierre.)
- Strangford, Lord, sent to Portugal to negotiate for the emigration of the royal family, i 122. Fraudulently reaped the laurels of that transaction, 106. Is sent as minister to the Brazils—his mischievous diplomacy there, iii 215. His inconsistent declarations, 216. (See Controversial Pieces.)
- Strenowitz Cornet. (See Ciudad Rodrigo.) Gallant exploit of, in recovering English prisoners, iii 444.
- Stuart, Charles, British envoy to the Gallician Junta, i 134. Chief of the civil agents in the Peninsula, 1-9. Exerts his influence for the establishment of a central government in Spain, 203. Induces the northern Juntas to meet in cortes at Lugo, 207. Is superseded by the appointment of Mr. Frere as minister plenipotentiary, 216. His useful exertions neglected by the English ministry, 216. Negotiates for the British occupation of

- Cadiz, 442. Sent on a secret mission to Vienna, 443. Curious deception practised by, in conjunction with others, on King Joseph, ii. 348. Supersedes Mr. Villiers as envoy to Portugal, and becomes a member of the Regency, 353-4. His efforts for supplying the troops and inhabitants on Massena's invasion, 424. His proceedings as member of the Regency, 427. Opposes the intrigues of the Patriarch's faction, 429. Retrospective view of his course, showing his abilities and true judgment, iii. 195. His proceedings at Vienna, 197. Is angrily recalled by Mr. Canning, 198. His proceedings in Portugal, 211, et seq. Proposes to take the whole direction of the finances himself, 215. Joins the Regency reluctantly, ib. His efforts successfully opposed by the Souza faction, 217. Licenses American vessels to relieve the famine, 219. Engages in commercial speculations to feed the army, 222. Produces some improvement in the revenue, 253. No longer a member of the Regency, 254. See 330, 331. Extracts from correspondence of, with Mr. Canning, in 1808, App. 521, et seq. Lord Wellesley's instructions to, in 1810, 525. His zeal and activity, iv. 185. Answer of, to the ministers' scheme for supplying the army by requisitions, 191. His advice regarding measures against the democrats, 203. Demands the interference of the British government in Portuguese affairs, 205. Insolent treatment of, by the Portuguese, 401. Letter from, relative to the negligence of the Admiralty, App. 511.
- Sturgeon, Colonel, ingeniously restores the bridge of Alcantara, iv. 18. Of Almaraz, 109. Is killed at a combat in the south of France, v. 175. Eulogy on, ib.
- Suchet, General, succeeds Junot in command of the third corps, i. 418. His vigor and prudence, ib. His troops are seized with panic at the battle of Alcañiz, and he retreats to Zaragoza, 420. His operations against the partidas, ii. 203. Advantages of his position, 206. Quells disturbances in Navarre, 276. Makes preparations to march against Valencia, 277. Is appointed Governor of Aragon, ib. Arrives before Valencia, 278. Is too weak to attack it, and returns to Zaragoza, 279. Effects of his failure, ib. Marches against Lerida, 283-9. His arrangements, 291. Commences the siege, 293. Drives the inhabitants into the citadel, 295. Forces the commander to surrender by bombarding them, 296. Reflections, 297. Marches to Mequinenza, 299. Besieges it, 300. Its fall, 301. Takes Morella, ib. Importance of these acquisitions, ib. Prepares to enter Catalonia, 302. Good effects of his administration in Aragon, iii. 116. Baffles the partidas on the borders of the province, ib. Marches against Tortosa, 119. Is left unsupported, 120. Disperses the Valencians, ib. Makes an arrangement with Macdonald for co-operation, 124. Embarrassed by the movements of, 129. Is harassed by the partidas, 130. Reorganizes the internal affairs of Aragon, 132. Defeats and takes General Navarro at Falset, ib. Invests Tortosa, 136. His daring conduct—the place surrenders, 139. Takes Felipe de Balaguer, 140. Returns to Zaragoza, 141. Napoleon increases his force and authority, 143. Goes to Lerida, 147. Refuses to send troops for the recapture of Figueras—his reasons, 151. His preparations for the siege of Tarragona, 152-3. His error about English finance, ib. Marches to Tarragona, 154. Description of, 155. Invests it, 156, et seq. Takes the Olivo by storm, 160. Completes the investment, 161. Is reinforced by General Abbé, 166-7. Carries the lower town by storm, 167. Attacks the upper town, 168. His situation embarrassing, 169. Storms the upper town and carries the place with great slaughter, 171, et seq. Chases Campo Verde, takes Villa Nueva de Sitjis, and repairs to Barcelona, 173-4. Is created a Marshal, 175. Marches against Monterrat, ib. Carries it by assault, 176. Returns to Zaragoza, and chases the partidas from Aragon, 178. Observations, 181, et seq. Prepares for the conquest of Valencia, 275. Commences the invasion, 278. Takes Murviedro and besieges Saguntum, 279. Defeats two of Blake's divisions, 280. Is repulsed in two assaults on the place, 280-81. Is embarrassed by the movements in Catalonia, &c., 281. Takes a position of battle against Blake, 285. Defeats him, 287. Saguntum surrenders, 288. Resolves to capture the whole of Blake's force, 291. Summons the city of Valencia, 293. Is joined by General Reille, 294. Forces the passage of the Guadalquivir, 295. Invests Valencia, 297. Receives from Blake the surrender of the city and of his whole army, 298. Is created Duke of Albufera, ib. His prudent administration, ib. Takes Gandia and Denia, and sends aid to Tarragona, 300. Besieges Peniscola, 302. It surrenders, 303. His army is reduced and his conquests cease, ib. Is made independent of Joseph's military authority, 433-4. His able administration in Valencia, 434. See iv. 85, 92. Intrenches a camp at Xativa, to oppose O'Donnell, 94. Joins the King on his arrival in Valencia, 96. Superior condition of his army, 124. Declines the chief command of the French armies, 130. His indecision—is embarrassed by the Sicilian army at Alicant, 160. Is deprived of a large convoy by the partidas, 163. His situation at the beginning of 1813, 219. Amount of the forces menacing him, ib. His position described, 221. Advances against Sir John Murray, 226. Captures a Spanish regiment at Villena, 227. Attacks Murray's position at Costalla, 228. Retreats, 229. Reflections on his movements, 230. See 251. He becomes strong, 297. His preparations against Murray, 298. His measures for the relief of Tarragona, 301. His operations indecisive, 306. Makes a rapid march to Valencia, 314. His movements contrasted with Murray's, 316. Abandons Valencia on hearing of the battle of Vittoria, 318. Commits a fatal error, ib. Relinquishes Aragon and makes Tarragona his base of operations, 319. His position described, 320. Pursues Lord William Bentinck, 323. Returns to Tarra-

- gon, and destroys its walls, 324. Weakness of his operations, ib. Advances against Bentinck, 325. Combat of Ordal, 326. Skirmishes with Bentinck, 327. Ceases the pursuit, 328. Observations, 330, 389, 450. Refuses to unite with Soult—his extraordinary view of affairs, 451, et seq. His projects compared with Soult's, 454. Report of the movements of his army during the first fifteen days of Sept., 1813, App. 513. His alarm preposterous, v. 96. Fails in an attempt to surprise General Clinton, 97. His force is reduced, but remains superior to the allies, 98. Further reduced—makes new arrangements, 100. Some of his garrisons entrapped by the treachery of a Spaniard in his service, 101, et seq. Is baffled in a negotiation for the evacuation of the province, 105. Destroys the works of several places, and concentrates at Figueras, ib. Receives and recognizes Ferdinand as King of Spain, 106. His apathy to the appeals of Soult, 180. Adopts the Bourbon colors of his own motion, 197. Assumes the command in the south of France in the interest of, 200.
- Swartz, General, shameful retreat of, before armed peasants in Catalonia, i. 62, 63. (See Catalonia.) Is taken prisoner with his troops by O'Donnell, iii. 126.
- Sydenham, Mr., is appointed on a commission upon the affairs of the Spanish Colonies, iii. 452. His opinion of the measure, ib. His account of the conduct of the partidas at Burgos, iv. 112-13.
- TAGUS, the, description of, the valley of, ii. 41. Spanish and Portuguese lines of frontier south of, 315. Operations south of, in 1813, iv. 218. North of, 232.
- Talavera, campaign of, ii. 132, et seq. Skirmish at, 141. Battle of, between Wellesley and Joseph, 158. Observations, 163. The inhabitants refuse aid to the suffering English soldiers, 165. General observations on the campaign, 187.
- Tallaia, Major, his heroic defence of Campo Mayor, iii. 71.
- Tamames, battle of, between the Duke del Parque and General Marchand, ii. 240.
- Tarentum, Duke of (See Macdonald.)
- Tarifa, importance of, to its possessor, iii. 308. Description of, 315-16. Siege of, 317. Daring sally, 318. Assault repulsed, 319. The siege is raised, 320. The true history of, ib. The merit of its defence due to Sir Charles Smith, 322. Extracts relative to the siege of, App. 537. Lord Wellington's opinion of, 539.
- Tarragona, tumultuous disorder in, i. 407. Invested by St. Cyr, 415. The siege raised, 417. (See Suchet.) Description of, and its defences, iii. 155. Is invested by Suchet, 156. Measures of defence neglected, 157. The garrison increased—the people dispirited, 159. The Olivo taken by storm, 160. Confusion and discord in, 164-5. The lower town stormed, 167. Movements for its relief fail, 170. The upper town stormed with terrible slaughter, and the place taken, 171, et seq. Observations, 182. Extracts relative to the siege, App. 491. Plans of the allies for the investment of, iv. 90. Is menaced by Eroles and Codrington, 164. English siege of, under Sir John Murray, 299. Topography of, 300. Position of the French forces for the relief of, 301. Its defences weak, 302. The siege raised, 305. The walls of, destroyed by Suchet, 324. Are repaired by General Clinton, v. 97-8. The Spanish authorities refuse to arm, 98.
- Tchitchagoff, Admiral, makes proposals for leading a Russian army to Italy, iii. 438.
- Thomières, General, (see Salamanca,) is killed, iv. 59.
- Torquemada, excesses of the soldiers in the wine-vaults of, during the retreat from Burgos, iv. 134.
- Thouvenot, General, resists the passage of the Adour at Bayonne by General Hope, v. 131. Makes a sally, and inflicts great loss on the investing force, 198. Hears of the termination of the war, 200.
- Torres Vedras, lines of, description of, ii. 416.
- Tortosa blockaded by General Suchet, iii. 120. Its governor feeble, 134. Description of the place, 135. Siege of, 137. Surrenders, 139. Is invested by the Spaniards, iv. 324. See v. 94.
- Toulouse, Soult retreats to, v. 175. Description of, 182. Movements of the allies before, 183, et seq. Battle of, 190. Observations on, 203. Actual state of the allied infantry engaged in, App. iv. 516. Order for the attack of the several divisions at, 519.
- Trant, Colonel, collects a small Portuguese army at Coimbra to oppose the progress of the French, ii. 58. (See Wellesley, etc.) Is appointed military governor of Oporto, 107. Delays the march of Massena, 396. Surprises Coimbra, and takes the French garrison prisoners, 414. Letter of thanks to, from the French prisoners at Oporto, App. 524. Foils an attempt of the French to seize Coimbra, iii. 52. Cuts their communication between Almeida and Ciudad Rodrigo, 66. Marches to the relief of Almeida, 383. The French retire, and he marches to Guarda, 384. Forms a daring design—his fortunate escape, 385. Retreats over the Mondego, 386. See App. 542-9.
- Treviso, Duke of. (See Mortier.)
- Tudela, battle of, between Marshal Lasnes and General Castaños, i. 274.
- Tupper, Mr., extracts from report of, relative to Blake's surrender of Valencia, App. iii. 553. (See Valencia.)
- UCLES, the Spanish army under Venegas routed at, by Marshal Victor, i. 368.

- United States, the, injustice of England towards, leading to the war of 1812, iii. 450. The Brazil trade exposed to the privateers of, by the negligence of the British Admiralty, iv. 185. The supplies of Portugal nearly dried up by the commercial, policy of, 201.
- VALDEZ, Bailey, President of the northern Cortes at Lugo, carries a proposition for the assembling of a Supreme Junta, i. 207. Is imprisoned by Cuesta while on his way as deputy to the Junta, 210. Cuesta is forced to release him, 211.
- Valençay, treaty of, between Napoleon and Ferdinand, rejected by the Cortes, v. 70. Views and proceedings in regard to, 71, et seq.
- Valencia, operations of Marshal Monecy in, in June, 1808, i. 71. Observations on, 76. Indifference of, to the calamities of other parts of Spain, ii. 233. Suchet makes an unsuccessful incursion into, 278-9. Disputes among the military and civil authorities of, iii. 118, 146. Its army marches to the succor of Tortosa, 118. Measures of defence taken on the fall of Tortosa, 146. Movements of the army of, 165, 174, 178, 179. Suchet prepares for the conquest of, 275. Weakness of the province, 278. Observations, 288. The Junta of, dissolves, and the province submits to the French, 299. The French army in, weakened by draughts, 302. Suchet's able administration in, 434. Menaced by the assembling of new armies, 435. (See Suchet.) Extracts relative to affairs in, in 1811, App. 455, et seq. Consul Tupper's report on, 558.
- Valencia, the city of, its governor killed in cold blood, i. 36. A band of fanatics massacre the French residents of, 37. They are suppressed on threatening the Junta, ib. Invested by Marshal Monecy, 73. His attack is repulsed, and he retires, 74. Its defences described, iii. 294. Battle at, between Suchet and Blake, 295. Siege of, 297. Surrenders, 298. Is abandoned by Suchet on hearing of the battle of Vittoria, iv. 318. Entered by Lord William Bentinck, 319.
- Vallonga, Portuguese General, is murdered by his troops, ii. 35.
- Valls, battle of, between Generals St. Cyr and Reding, i. 414.
- Van Halen, treachery of, v. 101. Succeeds by forgery in entrapping several French garrisons in Catalonia, 102, et seq.
- Venegas, General, is routed at Ucles by Marshal Victor, i. 368. Is threatened by King Joseph, and takes shelter in the Morena, ii. 135-6. The Junta increases his power, 137. Is secretly ordered by it not to co-operate with Wellesley and Cuesta, 143. Advances to Aranjuez, 176. Skirmishes there, 177. Is utterly routed at the battle of Almonacid, 178. He rallies, and his forces are increased by the Junta, 186. Is appointed Viceroy of Mexico, against its wish, iii. 207.
- Venta de Pozo, combat of, during Wellington's retreat from Burgos, iv. 133.
- Vera, combat of, iv. 423. Second do., 442.
- Vedler, General, supersedes General Lefebvre in command of the siege of Zaragoza, i. 57. Vigor of his operations, ib. Is ordered to raise the siege, 59. Supersedes General Reille in the Ampurdan, ii. 211. Prepares to besiege Gerona, 212. Completes the investment, 213. His undue boasting, 219. Is repulsed in an attack on Claros and Rovira, 227. Fails in an assault on Gerona, ib. The place surrenders, 230.
- Victor, Marshal, Duke of Belluno, commands the first corps d'armée, i. 257. Defeats Blake at the battle of Espinosa, 267. Enters Toledo, 366. Defeats Venegas at Ucles, 368. Occupies Talavera de la Reyna, ii. 41. Remains inert contrary to Napoleon's orders, 42. Marches against Cuesta, 43. Drives him from the Tagus, 45. Loses the fruits of his success by overrating his adversary's skill, 47. Totally defeats him at the battle of Medellín, 48. Resists the King's orders to march into Portugal, 51. Is thwarted in a secret negotiation for the surrender of Badajoz, ib. Is joined by General Lapisse at Merida, 52. Observations, 67. Retakes Alcantara but again retires, 105. Concentrates at Torremocha, 106. His inactivity, 107. Crosses the Tagus at Almaraz, 109. Retires to Talavera by order of the King, 135. Is exposed to great danger by the King's movements, and takes a position behind the Alberche, 136. Retreats before Wellesley and Cuesta to Torrijos, 142. Is joined by the King and Sebastiani, 148. (See Joseph.) Urges Joseph to give battle, contrary to the advice of Jourdan, 157. Is left by the King behind the Alberche after the battle of Talavera, 165. Retires before Sir R. Wilson, ib. (See Andalusia.) Pursues the Duke of Albuquerque to Cadiz, 273. Besieges Cadiz, 274. His dispositions for the blockade of, 305, et seq. His operations hindered by the fort of Matagorda, 310. Attacks and destroys it, 311. Criticism on his besieging works, 314. (See Soult.) State of his army, March 22, 1811, App. 489. Is apprised of a project for driving him out of his lines, iii. 35. Is discomfited by General Graham in the battle of Barosa, 38. State of his corps after, App. 473. Renews the blockade, 41. Weakness of his force, 306. Returns to France discontented, 341.
- Vich, combat at, between Generals Souham and O'Donnell, ii. 283.
- Villa Campa, General, commands a guerilla force between Zaragoza and Madrid, ii. 202. Defeated at Tremedal, 205. His movements, 277, 279. Captures a convoy and exterminates the escort, 298. Is pursued, and his force disbands, 299. Beats a French detachment near Utiel, 72. (See Partidas.)
- Villa Muriel, combat of, iv. 135. General Oswald's account of, v. 239. Captain Hopkins' memoir on, 240.

- Villatte, General, evacuates Salamanca—his admirable retreat, iv. 260-61. Commands Soult's reserve on the Bidassoa, 347. (See Soult.)
- Villiers, Mr., arrives at Lisbon as English envoy, i. 428. The populace armed with pikes in compliance with his wishes, 433. Powers given him by the ministers, App. 550. Is superseded by Mr. Charles Stuart, ii. 354. Inefficiency of his mission, iii. 211.
- Vimiero, battle of, between Sir A. Wellesley and General Junot, i. 149. Observations on, 176.
- Vittoria, accumulation of French stores at, from the evacuation of Burgos, Madrid, and Valladolid, iv. 268. The French armies are concentrated in the basin of, 274. Description of, 275. Dispositions for battle at, 278. Battle of, between Lord Wellington and King Joseph, 279. The immense spoils of, 285. Observations on, 291. Strength of the Anglo-Portuguese army at, App. 504.
- Vives, General, succeeds the Marquis of Palacios as commander-in-chief of Catalonia, i. 394. Is repulsed in an attack upon Barcelona, 295. His warfare contemptible, ib. His indecision, 401. Gives battle to St. Cyr at Cardadeu, 402. Is defeated, and escapes on foot, 403. Is thrown into prison to save his life, and Reding proclaimed in his place, 407.
- Von Decken, General, English military agent, joins in the intrigues of the Bishop of Oporto, i. 168. His letters in aid of, App. 496.
- WALCHEREN, the English expedition of, its miserable fate, ii. 130.
- Waldron, Captain, duel of, with a French officer, in front of the lines, at the battle of Castalla, iv. 229.
- Walker, General, is sent to direct the military affairs at Coruña, iii. 14. Is succeeded by Sir Howard Douglas, 269. Heads a heroic charge at the storming of Badajos, 375. Is desperately wounded, 376.
- Waters, Colonel, wonderful escape of, from captivity to the French, iii. 68.
- Wellesley, Sir Arthur, sent to the Peninsula in command of an expedition, i. 129. Vague and contradictory instructions of ministers to, ib. Immediately superseded by Sir Hew Dalrymple, 130. Copy of a dispatch to, 131. Its inconsistent folly, 132. The aid of his troops rejected by the Junta at Coruña, 133. Confers with the Bishop of Oporto, 134. Joins his army in Portugal, and hears of Dalrymple's appointment, 136. His plan of operations forbidden by Sir Harry Burrard, 147. Defeats Junot in the battle of Vimiero, 149. Prevented from following up the victory by Burrard, who assumes the chief command, 152. Called before a court of inquiry at Chelsea, 173. Observations on his campaign, 174. Letters of, to Sir Harry Burrard, on the operations in the Peninsula in 1808, App. 490. Resumes command of the army in Portugal, ii. 74. His resources, 76. His plans and arrangements, 77. Concentrates his army at Coimbra, 78. Receives proposals from French malcontents, 80. His situation compared with that of Sir J. Cradock, 81. Advances against Soult, 83. Plans a surprise against General Franceschi, 84. Is baffled by accident, 85. Arrives with his whole army opposite Oporto, 87. Passes the Douro, and takes possession of the city, 88, et seq. Pursues Marshal Soult, 91. Observations, 97. Returns to the Tagus, and encamps at Abrantes, 107. Is delayed in his operations by the obstinacy of Cuesta, 108. State of his army, and his embarrassments, 117. Neglected by the English ministers, 130. Operations open to his choice, 132. Marches into Spain by the line of the Tagus, 134. Reaches Placentia, 135. Arranges a plan of operations with Cuesta, 137-8. Distressed for subsistence, in consequence of the bad faith of the Junta, 139. Unites with Cuesta at Oropesa, and marches against Victor, 140. Difficulty of obtaining information 141. Is thwarted in his plans by Cuesta's absurd conduct, 142. Refuses to proceed further until his wants are supplied, 143. Is kept in ignorance of the formidable French force assembling against him, 147. Assumes the direction of both armies, and concentrates at Talavera, 150. Various combats, 152, et seq. Battle of Talavera, 158. Observations, 163. Bad conduct of the Spaniards towards his army, 165. Hears of the advance of Marshal Soult, 166. Marches against him, leaving his hospitals in charge of Cuesta, 167. His dangerous position, 169. Crosses the Tagus in retreat, 171. His plans thwarted by the bad faith of the Spaniards, 179. Distress of his troops, 180. Determines to retire into Portugal, 182. Marches upon Merida, 183. Calumniated by the Junta, 184. Defends his conduct, 185. Takes a position within the Portuguese frontier, 187. Sickness in the army, ib. Observations, ib. Comparison between his operations and those of Sir John Moore, 195. His plan for the government of Spain, 235. General review of the state of affairs by, 237. Refuses to aid the Junta in its rash operation against Madrid, 242. His counsel treated with contempt by, 254. Marches to the valley of the Mondego, 255. Vindication of his sojourn on the Guadiana, ib. His policy, 332. Created Baron Douro and Viscount Wellington, 333. State of his army in 1809, App. 467. Letters from, relative to the state of affairs on his resumption of the command, 473. Letter from, to Lord Castlereagh, relative to his advance into Spain, 475. To the Marquis Wellesley, relative to his retreat from, 476. (See Wellington.)
- Wellesley, Lord, supersedes Mr. Frere as minister plenipotentiary, ii. 182. Remonstrates against the conduct of the Junta, 183. Suggests to his brother an intermediate course

184. Defeats a plot against the Junta at Seville, 234. Returns to England, 332. Becomes Secretary for Foreign Affairs, 333. Suppresses the intrigues at the court of Brazil, and obtains an increase of Lord Wellington's powers, 430. His foreign policy contrasted with that of Mr. Canning, iii. 199. His views thwarted by Mr. Perceval, 200. His plans and proceedings relative to Portugal, 213, et seq. Instructions to Mr. Stuart, App. 525. Resigns his office, 407. Charges the reverses in the Peninsula to the imbecility of the ministers, iv. 182. His proofs, 183. Exposes their absurd financial system, 184.
- Wellesley, Sir Henry, arrives at Cadiz, as minister plenipotentiary, ii. 309. His negotiations relative to the Spanish colonies, iii. 208. See 328. Is inclined to favor the claims of Carlotta as a check on the spirit of democracy, iv. 470. Extracts from the correspondence of, relative to the state of Spain in 1813, App. 510.
- Wellington, Lord. (See Wellesley, Sir Arthur.) Debates in Parliament on his conduct, ii. 333. His sagacity and firmness vindicated, 334. His views for the defence of Portugal, 335. The English ministers comply with his proposals, 337. Enters into further explanations with them, 338. Similarity of his views to those of Sir John Moore, 340. His reasons for not advancing into Spain explained and vindicated, 341. Greatness of his plans, 343. His vigorous measures, 356. Number and character of his troops, 357. His plan of defence analyzed, 360, et seq. Difficulty of obtaining supplies, 364. Preliminary movements—troubles with the Regency, 368-9. Is urged to succor Ciudad Rodrigo, 373. His refusal to do so vindicated, 374. His situation critical, 384. Takes up new positions, 385, et seq. Erroneous notions of his views entertained by all parties, 391. Falls back on the advance of Massena, concentrates his army, and secures Coimbra, 394-5. Opposition of the Portuguese factions to his measures, 397. Rebukes the Regency, 398. Forced to determine upon giving battle, ib. Description of the field chosen, 399. Preliminary movements, 400. Battle of Busaco, 403. The French are repulsed, 406. Falls back to Leiria, 407. Disorders of the retreat, 408. Observations on his movements, 411. Enters the lines of Torres Vedras, 415. Description of those works, 416. Takes a permanent position of defence, 423. Political difficulties, 424. His vigorous vindication of his policy, 425. Plot against him exposed, 428. Receives additional powers from the Prince Regent, 430. Embarrassment arising from intermeddling and opposition, 430, et seq. Pursues Massena, 434. Assumes a permanent position in front of, at Santarem, 438. Reasons for and against a battle, 439. Strengthens his positions, and demands reinforcements, 442. Observations, 446. Extracts from letters of, to Lord Liverpool, relative to Spanish affairs, App. 490. Do., to various persons, relative to the affairs of Portugal, 500. Objects to maritime operations, iii. 16. Cuts off all communication between Soult and Massena, 27. Resolves to drive Massena from his position, 44. Receives reinforcements, 45. Pursues Massena in his retreat towards the Mondego, 46. Various combats, 48, 50, 54, 55. Halts for provisions, 57. Gloomy prospects, 58. Crosses the Ceira, and continues the pursuit, 59. Desperate combat at Sabugal, 64. Blockades Almeida, and makes new dispositions of his forces, 68. Contemplates offensive operations in Spain, 69. Leaves Spain and goes to the Alentejo, 70. Reaches Elvas, 76. Makes arrangements with Beresford for the siege of Badajos, 77. Returns to the north, 78. Takes a position behind the Dos Casas, 79. Gives battle at Fuentes Onoro, 81. Goes to Estremadura, 89. Reaches the field of battle at Albuera—completes the re-investment of Badajos, 102. His political difficulties, 200. His just views in relation to the Spanish colonies, 208, et seq. His connection with the political affairs of Portugal, 212, et seq. Reforms sought for by him, 216. His efforts thwarted by the Souza faction, 217. Proposes to abandon the country, ib. Embarrassments of his military operations, 218. His want of money, 220. Feeds his army by commercial speculations, 222. Reasons why he did not leave the country, ib. His plan of campaign, 223. His scanty means for the siege of Badajos, 224. Arrangements for the renewal of, 225. Fails in two assaults, and turns the siege into a blockade, 230. Observations, ib. Raises the blockade, and takes a strong position on the Caya, 234. Is menaced by Soult and Marmont, 235. His greatness shown in offering battle, 237. His firmness, 239. Draws Soult to Seville by sending Blake against that place, 240. His difficulties augmented, 246. His system of intelligence described, 247. His dispositions for future operations, 248. Secretly prepares for the siege of Ciudad Rodrigo, 249. Moves towards that place, ib. Galicia saved by his advance, 251. Blockades Rodrigo, 252. Inadequacy of his means for, 253. The Regency endeavors to get rid of him, 254. Prepares for the expected approach of Napoleon, 254-5. Disposition of his army on the advance of Marmont, 257. Combat of Elbodon, 259. Concentrates on new ground, 261. Combat of Aldea de Ponte, 262. Takes a position behind the Coa, 262. Observations, 263. Sends presents to the Spanish guerillas—his after opinion of them, 269. Political embarrassments, 331. Spreads his troops to seek for provisions, 334. Continues the preparations for the siege of Rodrigo, ib. His military situation described, 337. His plans, 339. Distressed state of his army, 340. Commences the siege, 342. His calculation balked by the scarcity of transport, 345. Orders the assault of the town, 347. It surrenders, 349. Observations, 350. Prepares for the siege of Badajos, 352-3. Embarrassed for want of money, 355. Gives up Ciudad to the Spaniards, 356. Falls sick, but soon recovers, 357. Third siege of Badajos, 358. Carries the town by assault, with great slaughter, 369, et seq. Abandons the design of invading Andalusia, 370, 388, 411. Marches against Marmont in Beira, 383. The French retreat, 387. Victuals the fortresses, and spreads his army in wide cantonments, 388. His operations eulogized, 396. His siege of Badajos examined, 402. The state of political affairs as affecting his operations, 407. His precautionary plans described, 409. Marred by the errors of his subordinates, 410. Plans a surprise of the bridge of Almaraz, 412. (See Hill.) Is embarrassed by the military and financial proceedings of Lord William Bentinck, 437-8, iv. 41. Advantage of his position, 440. See 443. Extracts from his correspondence, relative to the conduct of the English government, App. 526. To the siege of Tarifa, 539. Summary of his force at different periods, 1811-12, 552. Of his losses at Badajos, 554. His plans described, iv. 17. Number and organization of his army, May, 1812, 18. Improves the navigation of the Tagus and the Douro, 19. Remarkable letter from, to Lord Liverpool, ib. Arrangements for his contemplated march, 20. His account of the bad conduct of the British army, 24. His opinion of subaltern officers untenable, 26. Marches to the Tormes, 27. Besieges the forts at Salamanca, 28. The aspect of affairs becomes gloomy, 29. Takes a position of battle on the approach of Marmont, 30. Skirmishes with him, 31. His dispositions and movements—criticism on, 32-3. The forts surrender, 35. Destroys them, and follows Marmont to the Duero, 36. Movements elsewhere affecting his position, 37, et seq. Extreme difficulty of his situation, 40. His great distress for money, 41-2. Opposes Marmont's passage of the Duero, 44. Narrow escape of, at the combat of Castrejon, 45. Retires behind the Guarena—combat there, 46-7. Expects battle, 49. Is outflanked, and falls back, 50. Prepares to return to Portugal, 51. Takes position to cover Salamanca, 52, et seq. Strength of his army, App. 503. Seizes an advantage given by Marmont to bring on a battle, 55. Battle of Salamanca, 56. Restores the battle, when it appears to be going against him, 61. Is slightly wounded at the close of, 63. Crosses the Tormes in pursuit, 65. His pursuit slack, 66. Takes Valladolid, 67. Marches against the King, 67-8. Crosses the mountains, 70. Enters Madrid—his enthusiastic reception there, 72. Receives the capitulation of the Retiro, with immense stores, ib. Observations on his campaign, 75, et seq. His sagacity shown, 80. His situation, 84. Is disappointed in regard to the Sicilian expedition, 87. His plan for, 90. Resolves to drive Soult from Andalusia, unless he abandons it, 100. Prevents General Maitland from returning to Sicily, 103. His general plans considered, 104. Inefficient hospital arrangements of his army, 105. His combinations described, 108. Sufferings of his army, 110. Marches against Clausel, 111. Enters Burgos, 112. Criticism on his movements, 113. Besieges the castle of Burgos, ib. His plan of attack, 115. The siege terminates unsuccessfully, 123. Takes a position of battle to oppose Souham, 127. Skirmishes—his weakness in artillery, 128. Is made commander of all the Spanish armies—reasons of his acceptance, 129. Resolves to retreat, 131. Begins the movement by a bold march under the guns of the castle, 132. Takes post behind the Pisnerga—disorders in his rear, 137. Retreats to Salamanca, and is joined by Hill, 144. Determines to maintain his position on the Tormes, ib. His dispositions, 145. Is desirous of receiving battle, 148. Soult turns his position by passing the Tormes, 149. Gains the rear of, by a bold march, and halts on the Valmusa river, 150. Continues the retreat—misconduct of the soldiers, 151. A surprise, ib. Passes the Huebra—combat there, 152. Subordination of his officers—a practical rebuke, 154. Reaches Ciudad Rodrigo, 154-5. Estimate of his loss, 155. Takes winter quarters, 156. General observations—reproaches the army, 167. His censures indiscriminate, 168-9. Critical examination of his campaign, 169, et seq. His errors of execution, 174. Comparison between his retreat and that of Moore in 1808, 177. Feeling excited in England by, 182. His zeal and ability, 185. Opposes the financial schemes of the English ministers, 186. Repels a charge of exaction and fraud against the English army, 189. Discusses the project of selling the crown and church lands of Portugal, ib. Goes to Cadiz, and procures a reorganization of the Spanish military system, 193. Goes to Lisbon, and is enthusiastically received, 194. His political difficulties in Portugal, 198, et seq. Libels circulated against, 202. Letters from, to the Prince Regent, relative to the misconduct of the Regency, 205. Increases his force on the Agueda, 234. His plans vindicated against French writers, 235. Restores the discipline and improves the condition of the army, 250. Its organization and distribution, 251. His plans of campaign, 252, et seq. Bids farewell to Portugal, 255. Opposes the invasion of Italy, 256. Always discontent among his troops, 259. Advances upon Salamanca, 260. Combat there, 261. Unites his army at Toro, 262. Ability of these movements, ib. Loses an opportunity by halting, 266. Pursues the retreating French armies, 267. Cuts them off from the sea-coast, 271. Transfers his dépôts from Portugal to Biscay, ib. Marches into the basin of Vittoria, 272. Takes a position of battle, 277. His numbers, ib. His dispositions, 278. Battle of Vittoria, 279. Captures immense stores of artillery and treasure, 285. Pursues the King, 286. Marches against Clausel, and endeavors to surround him, 288. Observations, 289. Blockades Pampeluna, and besieges San Sebastian, 295. His plans against Suchet thwarted by the ill conduct of Sir John Murray, 308, et seq. Distribution of his forces, 331. Turns the siege of San Sebastian into a blockade, 342. Effects of his campaign upon Napoleon's position, 344. His dispositions against Soult, 346. His relative strength, and position described, 347, 352. Movements and combats of his troops, 355, et seq. Is misled by Soult's combinations, 364. Discovers their object, and makes new arrangements, 365. Confusion created by the movements, 366. Joins General Picton, in front of Soult's position, 367. His penetration, 368. New dispositions, 369-70. First battle of Sauroren, 371. Second do., 377. Pursues Soult, 379. Is prevented by an accident from capturing him, 382. Is disappointed in the conduct of his subordinates, 384. Narrow escape of, from capture, 386. His losses, 387. Observations on his campaign, ib. His reasons for not marching into France, 394. His new position described, 396. His operations cramped by naval mismanagement, 397. Renews the siege of San Sebastian, 399. Bombards the castle, 412. It surrenders, 413. Defends himself against Spanish libels, 415. Is reinforced, and prepares for battle during the siege, 420. Combats, 422-3. Remarks, 423. His views on the subject of invading France, 429-30, 432. His personal hatred of Napoleon, 430. Is stripped of generals, 433. Desires to go to Catalonia, ib. Resolves to establish a part of his army in France, 435. His dispositions for attack, 436. Passes the Bidassoa, and drives the French from their camps there, 438. Carries their main positions, 442, et seq. Observations, 446. Organizes his army in three grand divisions, 448. Fall of Pampeluna, 456, et seq. His cruel threat against the garrison, 459. His political difficulties in Portugal, 460, et seq. Censures the mischievous course of the English newspapers, 464. Threatens to quit the Peninsula, 465. His expression of disgust at the course of the Portuguese authorities, 466. Expects civil war in Spain, 468. Restrains the English ministry from interfering in the internal government of, ib. Factious opposition to him described by a member of the Cortes, 469. His authority as generalissimo systematically violated by the government, 472. Describes the miserable state of the country, 473. Of the military administration, 474. Resigns his command of the Spanish armies, 475-6. The ministers propose to remove him to Germany—his reply, 476. Is reinstated as generalissimo on his own terms, ib. Recommends the withdrawal of the British army, 477. Force under the command of, at different periods in 1813-14. App. 515. Morning state of his army, 10th April, 1814, 520. Distress of his troops, v. 10. Resolves to invade France, ib. His general disposition for the attack of Soult, 12. Battle of the Nivelle, 16. Observations on his management of, 27. Is prevented by bad weather from pushing his victory, 30. Sends home the Spanish troops in consequence of their plundering, 31. Takes permanent cantonments, ib. Various skirmishes, 32. Proposes to force a passage over the Nive, 33. Passage and battle of, 34, et seq. Is rendered somewhat negligent by success, 37. Is joined by three of Soult's German regiments, 43. Joins Hill at the close of the battle of St. Pierre, 50. Observations, 53. Designs to force Soult to abandon Bayonne, 56. General movements, 59. Reproaches the Spanish generals for the excesses of their troops, 61. His difficulties with Portugal and Spain continued, 64. Recommends the ministers to prepare for war with the latter, 66. Opposes the dismissal of his enemies from the Regency, 68. Reasons for this course, 69. Is alarmed at the treaty of Valençay—his views upon, 71. Recommends a general amnesty, 73. His hatred of democratic institutions, a reason for the opposition of the Cortes to him, 75. His manly policy contrasted with the wiles of the allied sovereigns, 81. Is neglected by the ministers, 85. Reemonstrates, and explains his situation and views, 86. Collision with the naval authorities, 88. Is regarded by ministers as a visionary, 89. His financial situation nearly intolerable, 90. Barbarous conduct of the Spanish authorities towards his hospitals, 92. The French inhabitants not affected to, 113. Is joined by several representatives of the Bourbons, 115. His caution towards, ib. See 162. Is embarrassed by the hostility of the Spaniards, 115. His situation suddenly ameliorated, 119. His wise policy and foresight, ib. Recoins his British gold into Napoleons, 120. Makes arrangements for the investment of Bayonne, ib. Passage of the Gaves, 124, et seq. See 131, 134. Recalls the Spanish troops with great reluctance, 133. Authorizes the inhabitants to arm themselves for the preservation of order, 139. Battle of Orthes, 142. Restores the battle when nearly lost, 143. Pursues Soult, 145. Is wounded, 146. Is checked by the flooding of the rivers, 147. Observations, 153. His embarrassments, 159. Resolves to seize Bordeaux, ib. Sends Beresford for that purpose, 163. Protests against the bad faith of the Duke of Angouleme, 165. Embarrassed by ministerial neglect, 170. His position, 171. Is menaced by Soult, and maintains the defensive, 172. His forces increase, 173. Puts the army in motion, 174. Pursues Soult from Tarbes, 177-8. His tardiness defended, 179. His plans and operations before Toulouse, 183, et seq. Crosses the Garonne, 188. Difficulty of attacking, 183. Dispositions for, 189. Battle of Toulouse, 190. Enters the city in triumph, 197. Hears of Napoleon's abdication, and the war terminates, ib. General observations, 200. Reflections on his campaigns and his genius, 216.

Williams, Mr., a cavalry officer, terrible death of, at the combat of Castrejon, iv. 45.

Wilson, Sir Robert, organizes the Lusitanian Legion at Oporto, i. 423. The legion raised to support the Bishop's party, 430. Occupies the fortress of Almeida, 437. His activity as a partisan, 438. Throws off the Bishop's authority, and the legion becomes a national corps, 456. His operations against General Lapisse, ii. 52. (See Talavera.) Is defeated by Ney at the pass of Baños, 175-6.

XATIVA, San Felipe de, Marshal Suchet intrenches a camp at, iv. 94. Description of 221.

YORK, the Duke of, recommends the employment of a larger force in the Peninsula, i. 226. Extract from his minute in relation to, App. 523. Wellington somewhat thwarted by, iv. 251. Withdraws some of the best soldiers of, v. 92.

ZAMORA is invested by General Silveira, iv. 104. The siege raised by General Foy, 107. Evacuated by the French, and entered by the allies, 262.

Zaragoza, strategic importance of, i. 48. First siege of, 55. Its condition and means of defence, ib. Its desperate resistance, 58. The siege raised, 59. Observations, ib. Confusion in, after the battle of Tudela, 370. Description of its fortifications, 371. Extraordinary preparations for its defence, 372. Second siege of, 374. Difficulties of the French, 378. The walls battered down, and the chief engineers on both sides killed, 381. The war carried into the streets, 382. System of terror pursued to keep up the defence, ib. Murmurs of the French soldiers, 385. The city surrenders, 387. Observations, 388. Is evacuated by the French, and the castle invested by the partidas, iv. 318-19.

Zornosa, battle of, between Marshal Lefebre and General Blake, i. 259.

CHOICE STANDARD WORKS.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION
OF
HALLAM'S COMPLETE WORKS,

With New Table of Contents and Indexes.

IN SIX VOLS., CROWN, 8VO, CLOTH.

PRICE, $7.50 PER SET. (Reduced from $17.50.)

(Bound in Half Calf extra, $3 per vol.)

THIS UNABRIDGED EDITION OF HALLAM'S WORKS COMPRISES

The Constitutional History of England, 2 Vols.

The Middle Ages, The State of Europe During the Middle Ages, 2 Vols.

Introduction to the Literature of Europe, 2 Vols.

REPRINTED FROM THE LAST LONDON EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED BY THE AUTHOR.

MACAULAY, in his famous estimate of Hallam, says: "Mr. Hallam is, on the whole, far better qualified than any other writer of our time for the office which he has undertaken. He has great industry and great acuteness. His knowledge is extensive, various, and profound. His mind is equally distinguished by the amplitude of its grasp, and by the delicacy of its tact. His speculations have none of that vagueness which is the common fault of political philosophy. On the contrary, they are strikingly practical, and teach us not only the general rule, but the mode of applying it to solve particular cases. . . . Mr. Hallam's work is eminently judicial. Its whole spirit is that of the Bench, not that of the Bar. He sums up with a calm, steady impartiality, turning neither to the right nor to the left, glossing over nothing, exaggerating nothing, while the advocates on both sides are alternately biting their lips to hear their conflicting misstatements and sophism exposed."

This "STANDARD EDITION" of HALLAM'S WORKS, in 6 Vols., AVERAGES NEARLY 800 PAGES IN EACH VOL., and is sold at $7.50 PER SET (formerly published in 10 Vols. at $17.50.)

Sent on receipt of price, charges prepaid, by

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON, 714 Broadway, New York.

CHOICE STANDARD WORKS.

A NEW EDITION
OF
D'ISRAELI'S COMPLETE WORKS.

Edited by his Son, LORD BEACONSFIELD,

With a fine Portrait on Steel. 6 Vols., Crown 8vo, Cloth.

PRICE, $7.50 PER SET. (Reduced from $15.00.)

(Bound in Half Calf extra, $3 per vol.)

THIS NEW EDITION OF D'ISRAELI'S WORKS COMPRISES

THE CURIOSITIES OF LITERATURE, - - - 3 Vols.
CALAMITIES AND QUARRELS OF AUTHORS AND MEMOIRS, 1 Vol.
AMENITIES OF LITERATURE, SKETCHES AND CHARACTERS, 1 Vol.
LITERARY CHARACTER, HISTORY OF MEN OF GENIUS, - 1 Vol.

A collection of literature which no judiciously selected library will fail to have, and no person of literary taste and culture willingly do without.

They are, in truth, a history of literature and of literary men, gathered from the writings of centuries and from living authors, philosophic and learned, yet easy and fascinating.

The Curiosities of Literature treat of everything curious in the literary kingdom. The formation of libraries, past and present, bibliomania, the oddities of authors, their labors, anecdotes, successes, failures, etc., containing a valuable mass of rare information.

The Amenities of Literature "is in a different strain, and treats of Language, the origin and growth of our own, the discovery and progress of the art of printing, the growth of literature, its patrons, followers and builders, and of other matters which have a broad and general bearing upon the subject in hand."

The Calamities and Quarrels of Authors "contains an account of authors' struggles, difficulties and poverty as a class * * * teaching them their failings and holding up the mirror for those who may be benefited by a view of the difficulties which beset authors."

Literary Character "is probably the most searching and distinctive treatise of its kind extant, made up, as it is, from the feelings and confessions of men of genius."

This NEW IMPRESSION of the famous works of the elder D'ISRAELI, IN 6 VOLS., PRICE $7.50 PER SET (formerly published in 9 Vols. at $15.00), has been aptly said to comprise the cream of English Literature of Europe from the times of Dr. Johnson to our own, and to constitute a whole library in themselves.

Sent on receipt of price, charges prepaid, by

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON, 714 Broadway, New York.

CHOICE STANDARD WORKS.

A NEW AND HANDSOME LIBRARY EDITION

OF

MILMAN'S COMPLETE WORKS,

With Table of Contents and Full Indexes.

IN 8 VOLS., CROWN 8VO, CLOTH.

PRICE, $12.00 PER SET. (Reduced from $24.50.

(Bound in Half Calf extra, $25.00 per set.)

THIS EDITION OF MILMAN'S WORKS, THOROUGHLY
REVISED AND CORRECTED, COMPRISES

The History of the Jews, 2 Vols.

The History of Christianity, 2 Vols.

History of Latin Christianity, 4 Vols.

DR. MILMAN has won lasting popularity as a historian by his three great works, HISTORY OF THE JEWS, HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY, and HISTORY OF LATIN CHRISTIANITY. These works link on to each other, and bring the narrative down from the beginning of all history to the middle period of the modern era. They are the work of the scholar, a conscientious student, and a Christian philosopher. DR. MILMAN prepared this new edition so as to give it the benefit of the results of more recent research. In the notes, and in detached appendices to the chapters, a variety of very important questions are critically discussed.

The author is noted for his calm and rigid impartiality, his fearless exposure of the bad and appreciation of the good, both in institutions and men, and his aim throughout, to utter the truth always in charity. The best authorities on all events narrated have been studiously sifted and their results given in a style remarkable for its clearness, force and animation.

MILMAN'S WORKS HAVE TAKEN THEIR PLACE AMONG THE APPROVED CLASSICS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. The general accuracy of his statements, the candor of his criticisms and the breadth of his charity are everywhere apparent in his writings. His search at all times seems to have been for truth, and that which he finds he states with simple clearness and with fearless honesty. HIS WORKS ARE IN THEIR DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY AS VALUABLE AS THE VOLUMES OF GIBBON ARE IN SECULAR HISTORY. THEY DESERVE A PLACE IN EVERY LIBRARY IN THE LAND. THIS NEW EDITION, in 8 vols., contains AN AVERAGE OF OVER 900 PAGES per volume. PRICE, $12.00 PER SET. (Formerly published in 14 vols. at $24.50.)

Sent on receipt of price, charges prepaid, by

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON, 714 Broadway, New York.

CHOICE STANDARD WORKS.

A NEW EDITION OF THE HISTORY OF THE CRUSADES.

A. D. 300-1270.

IN EIGHT PARTS, WITH AN INDEX OF 47 PAGES.

By JOSEPH FRANCOIS MICHAUD.

And a Preface and Supplementary Chapter by Hamilton W. Mabie.
3 vols., crown 8vo, Cloth. $3.75.

(Bound in Half Calf extra, $3 per vol.)

"The ability, diligence and faithfulness with which MICHAUD has executed his great task are undisputed, and it is to his well-filled volumes that all must resort for copious and authentic facts and luminous views respecting this most romantic and wonderful period in the annals of the world."

This work has long been out of print, and its republication is opportune. It narrates very fully and in a picturesque and interesting manner, the most striking episode in European history, and will add an invaluable work to the historical literature which has recently been put into the hands of the reading public in editions combining sound scholarship and reasonable prices. Of the first excellence as an authority, full of romantic incident, graphic in style, this new edition of that which is by universal consent

THE STANDARD HISTORY OF THE CRUSADES, will have equal value for the student and general reader.

RIVERSIDE EDITION OF

MACAULAY'S ESSAYS,

Critical, Historical and Miscellaneous. With a Biographical and Critical Introduction from the well-known pen of Mr. E. P. Whipple. 3 vols., crown 8vo, Cloth, 3,000 pages.

With a fine Portrait on Steel. Price, $3.75.

(Bound in Half Calf extra, $3 per vol.)

In this edition the essays have been arranged in chronological order, so that their perusal affords, so to speak, a complete biographical portraiture of the brilliant author's mind. It contains the pure text of the author and the exact punctuation, orthography, etc., of the English editions.

A very full index (55 pages) has been specially prepared for this edition. In this respect it is superior to the English editions, and wholly unlike any other American edition.

Sent on receipt of price, charges prepaid, by

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON, 714 Broadway, New York.

CHOICE STANDARD WORKS.

THE MOST ELEGANT EDITION PUBLISHED

OF

CHARLES LAMB'S COMPLETE WORKS,

Including ELIA and ELIANA (the last containing the hitherto uncollected writings of Charles Lamb), corrected and revised, with a sketch of his life by Sir Thomas Noon Talfourd, and a fine Portrait on Steel.

3 VOLS., CR. 8VO, CLO. PRICE, $3.75 PER SET. (REDUCED FROM $7.50.)
(Bound in Half Calf extra, $3 per vol.)

With a volume of Letters and Essays collected for this edition by the industry of, and arranged with much taste and skill by, J. E. BABSON, Esq., of Boston, "who literally knows Lamb by heart."

In Mr. Babson's preface to this additional volume, he says:

"Other writers may have more readers, but none have so many true, hearty, enthusiastic admirers as he. * * * With all lovers and appreciators of true wit, genuine humor, fine fancy, beautiful imagination and exquisite pathos, he is a prodigious favorite. Indeed, there is something—a nameless, indescribable charm—about this author's productions which captivates and enravishes his readers, and though Lamb found many admiring readers in his lifetime, since his death his fame and popularity have increased greatly. Then he was generally looked upon as a mere eccentric—a person of more quaintness than humor, of more oddity than genius. Now he is acknowledged to be a most beautiful and original genius—one of the 'fixed stars of the literary system'—whose light will never pale or grow dim, and whose peculiar brightness and beauty will long be the wonder and delight of many. * * * For years I have been hopefully and patiently waiting for somebody to collect these scattered and all but forgotten articles of Lamb's. * * * Without doubt, all genuine admirers, all true lovers of the gentle, genial, delightful 'Elia,' to whom almost every word of their favorite author's inditing is 'farsed with pleasance,' will be mightily pleased with these productions of his inimitable pen, NOW FIRST COLLECTED TOGETHER."

As this "SUPERB EDITION" of LAMB'S WORKS, in 3 Vols., AVERAGING NEARLY 800 PAGES IN EACH VOLUME, is sold at the EXCEEDINGLY LOW PRICE OF $3.75 PER SET (formerly published in 5 Vols. at $7.50), the Publishers confidently believe IT WILL COMMEND ITSELF TO ALL FOR PERSONAL USE AND FOR LIBRARIES.

Sent on receipt of price, charges prepaid, by

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON, 714 Broadway, New York.

